Japanese Battle Way Into Blazing Tri-Cities

Chinese Slow Advance Rear Guard Left Fires in Hankow Vast Areas Blasted

Chinese Fight On

HANKOW'S CAPTURE is a pyrrhic victory for Japan, Mark J. Ginsbourg, special correspondent of The Post, writes on Page 11.

Rear Guard Sacrificed

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Oct. 26.—The Japanese vanguard today marched into burning Wuchang, one of the Hankow tri-cities, Japanese dispatches from the front said, and met sanguinary resistance from Chinese detachments in street fighting.

The occupation of Wuchang began after another advance guard from the north had entered the outskirts of Hankow, across the river. The main body of Japanese still was about 10 miles from Wuchang.

Retreat Is Orderly

The advance guard entered through the Paoyang gate and began a slow mopping-up process, with the fighting gradually spreading throughout the walled city, as Chinese units protected the retreat of their comrades.

Chinese stragglers were withdrawing westward by boat as the Japanese entered.

Explosions still rocked the three Wuhan cities—Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang—China's rich industrial center, and flames stabbed the sky as unchecked fires spread, a trail of ruin and ashes for the invaders to seize.

Along a semicircle from north to south the Japanese were arrayed for occupation of the great inland port and commercial center—a principal goal in the undeclared war that started July 7, 1937.

Destruction Wide

The city, erstwhile provisional capital and heart of Chinese resistance, already was threatened by spreading flames, apparently the result of the Chinese "scorched earth" policy applied in the face of Japanese conquest.

While it was reported that the Chinese chose not to defend the city "for strategic reasons," a Japanese report from the front lines said reconnoitering airmen sighted evidences of last-hour resistance within the city.

A correspondent of Domei, Japanese news agency, said the airmen reported Chinese were taking up positions adjacent to formerly foreign-controlled areas of Hankow.

The northern portions of Hankow were said to be the most widely

Tydings Intercedes For Postmistress Who Fought Him

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, has interceded to prevent dismissal of Mrs. Maude Toulson, postmistress at Salisbury, Md., for working against him in Maryland's primary election, it became known yesterday.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee found that Mrs. Toulson had violated the law by working for the nomination of Representative Lewis in the Administration attempt to "purge" Tydings from the Senate. The committee asked Postmaster General Farley for a report on what action he intended to take.

Yesterday Acting Postmaster General Howes wrote the committee that Senator Tydings had advised the department he believed Mrs. Toulson did not have "any real intention of violating these rules."

Senator Sheppard, committee chairman, replied, however, that Tydings' intervention did not change the situation.

There the matter rested last night.

Cardenas Rejects Oil Seizure Protest

Mexico City, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—A petition of American and other foreign oil companies for "administrative revocation" of the March 18 decree expropriating their properties was rejected tonight by President Cardenas and the ministers of finance and national economy.

Duke of Kent Made Viceroy For Australia

DUKE OF KENT

Imperial Unity Aim In Far East Outpost Threatened by Japan

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 25.—The Duke of Kent, Britain's royal socialite, was appointed governor general of Australia yesterday in what was believed a move by the British government to strengthen ties of the sprawling empire.

The duke, 35 years old and youngest brother of King George VI, accompanied by his duchess, the former Princess Marina of Greece, will go to Australia in November next year to succeed Lord Gowrie. He probably will be accompanied by his two children, Prince Edward and Princess Alexandra.

In Perilous Times

The official announcement said: "The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the appointment of His Royal Highness, the Duke of Kent, as governor general of the Commonwealth of Australia in succession to Lord Gowrie."

The appointment was made Monday after King George had received Stanley Bruce, high commissioner for Australia, and was announced when Britain feels her widespread empire threatened from many directions.

Japan has blocked British interests in Central China with the occupation of Shanghai and Hankow, and has cut off her busy port, Hongkong, from the tributary trading area in South China.

Australia lies in the path of possible Japanese expansion southward in the Far East.

Germany is pressing for return of war-lost colonies, some of which are under mandate to British dominions, and is consolidating her position in southeastern Europe since the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia. Her influence is advancing toward strife-torn Palestine, under British mandate.

The Duke of Kent's appointment was expected to serve as a moral gesture to the world that the British royal family has a personal interest in the dominions which under the 1931 statute of Westminster are bound to Britain only by common allegiance to the crown.

Roosevelt, Lindsay Confer

President Roosevelt and Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, yesterday discussed the Palestine immigration problem and the expected visit of the British King and Queen to Canada and, probably, the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference that both matters came up at his talk with the ambassador, but he would give no further information.

Roosevelt Calls Dies Quiz Unfair

Roiled Over Murphy Defends Governor Sees Hand of G. O. P. Brands Inquiry 'Tool'

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt, in a powerfully worded defense of Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, last night struck a smashing blow at the activities of the Dies committee, investigating un-American activities.

The President angrily termed charges made against Murphy before that committee "absurdly false."

Blames Republicans

He said the charges were made "by a coterie of disgruntled Republican officeholders against a profoundly religious, able and law-abiding Governor."

He slapped at the tactics of the committee in permitting itself "to be used in a flagrantly unfair and un-American attempt to influence an election."

An ousted Republican city manager of Flint, Mich., John M. Barringer, and a Republican judge, Paul V. Gadola, of the Genesee County Circuit Court of Appeals at Flint, accused Murphy last week of "treasonable activities" in the 1937 sit-down strikes.

The President, asked at his press conference if he were "concerned" about the charges, said he certainly was concerned, so much so that he intended to prepare and issue a statement about them because he did not trust that his off-hand language would be polite enough.

His Words Ireful

The President hit directly at the committee's methods when he noted that "at this hearing the Dies committee made no effort to get at the truth, either by calling for facts to support mere personal opinion or by allowing facts and personal opinion on the other side."

Calling the Michigan fight between Murphy, a Democrat, and former Gov. Frank Fitzgerald, a Republican, "a vitally important gubernatorial election," the President smashed at the "lurid charges," "undeniable bias," "petty politicians," and "mere opinion evidence."

Every sentence concerned with the committee was blazingly critical—every sentence concerning Gov. Murphy was laudatory. The President spoke of Murphy as one who should be praised by "every peace-loving American;" denied that Murphy had condoned sit-down strikes; eulogized the red-haired, quiet-mannered Governor for averting bloodshed and riot without the loss of a single life, and named Murphy's methods as "the American way of doing things."

He noted the praise given Murphy's settlement by Alfred P.

2 Burn to Death As Plane Crashes In Pennsylvania

Carlisle, Pa., Oct. 25 (A.P.).—An airplane pilot and his passenger burned to death late today in the flaming wreckage of their ship which crashed on a farm near Carlisle.

The victims were Charles Steigleman, 28, of Carlisle, and Wilbur (Buzz) Sebelist, 50, of nearby Boiling Springs, a parachute jumper.

The plane crashed less than a half hour after Steigleman took off from the farm where he kept his plane.

President to Start Building Of Airport, End Site Debate

Before returning to Hyde Park, President Roosevelt intends to go to Gravelly Point to inaugurate construction of the national flying terminal, thus bringing to a close Washington's 12-year-old airport controversy.

Obviously anxious to expedite work, the President said at his press conference yesterday that he might go to the terminal site tomorrow or Friday.

Although definite plans for the ceremony remain to be completed, it is understood officials of the Civil Aeronautics Authority expect to have an Army dredge or a steam shovel at the site to begin work when the President gives the signal. The terminal probably will get into operation in about 12 months, if schedules are maintained, CAA officials said.

During the years since Washington and Hoover Airports were combined, governmental, commercial and civic interests have been agitating for improvement of the terminal or construction of a more suitable air base for nonmilitary operations.

The site at Gravelly Point long has been indorsed by the Aero Club of Washington, the Board of Trade and other civic organizations. Opposition to construction of a landing field at the site first was based on the cost of the project, but more recently its proximity to Bolling Field and the fact that it might be

President Sees Politics In Pay-Hour Layoffs

Hints for Employers Who Is Subject to Act? Penalties Outlined

By Felix Cotten.

This is the second of a series of articles on the wage-hour law. The third article will appear tomorrow.

Important things for employers subject to the wage-hour act to bear in mind follow:

1. It is unlawful to pay any wage to persons affected by the act less than 25 cents per hour or its equivalent. The minimum wage will rise automatically to 30 cents an hour on October 24, 1939. "Willful" violations are punishable by fine for the first offense and fine or imprisonment, or both, for subsequent offenses.

2. A 44-hour work week must be observed during the first year. On October 24, 1939, the workweek drops automatically to 42 hours, and on October 24, 1940, to 40 hours.

Time and a Half

3. If persons affected by the act are employed or permitted to work more than the maximum number of hours, they must be compensated for overtime at the rate of at least time and a half. All workers engaged in interstate commerce or in the production of goods part of which will move across the District boundary line or a State line are affected. This provision is to be interpreted in its broadest sense. "Willful" violations of this provision are punishable in the same way as violations of the wage provision.

No Pay Cuts

4. Regardless of whether violations are willful, employes can sue their employers, directly or through agents, for double the amount of unpaid minimum wages or overtime compensation. Employers, in such cases, will be subject not only to the double liability but to payment of costs of the suit and a "reasonable" fee for lawyers hired by their employes. Moreover, employes bringing suit shall not be discriminated against.

5. The act states that its provisions shall not justify employers in reducing rates of pay which are in excess of the established minimum. As a result, the Labor Department wage and hour division has warned employers not to assume that they can keep on paying workers the same wage for 48 hours of work each week simply by cutting the

Cites Election's Nearness Calls for Joint Action Says Jobs Will Be Saved

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt yesterday called for collaboration of employers with Government officials in a practical effort to make the new wage-hour law work.

He termed it unfortunate that two weeks before elections some industrial plants should close down because of the wage-hour requirements and said Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews is in accord with him on that point.

National laws of this kind, the President said, work themselves out and although some jobs undoubtedly will be affected they would by no means be lost permanently. What the Government and employers should do, he repeated, is sit down together and try to make the law work.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement to reporters followed a White House conference with Administrator Andrews on the first-day flurry of shut-downs, and administrative needs of the fund-shy wage and hour division of the Labor Department.

Earlier Andrews at a press conference expressed conviction that employes who lost jobs in scattered plant closings will be re-employed by "decent employers when the chiseling minority quits the business."

Andrews questioned unofficial estimates that 80,000 persons lost jobs by first-day shut-downs and declared the pecan shelling industry's estimate that 50,000 of its

WPA Foreman With Maid, 2 Cars, 3 Houses Is Ousted

Pittsburgh, Oct. 25 (A.P.).—J. E. Kesner, county WPA chief, said today he had dismissed Frank R. Fleming, a $150-a-month WPA foreman, who inherited $70,383 from his grandmother last year.

Kesner charged Fleming, a foreman for three years, employed a maid, operated two cars and owned three houses. Fleming claimed he was not employed under a relief classification, and blamed his discharge on "politics." Kesner said WPA jobs were intended for persons without money.

School Study Urges Power For D.C. Board

2 Call Code Antiquated Assail Congress' Control Ask for Lump Funds

A public school system for the District that will be geared to present-day needs, and free from interference by either members of Congress or the District Commissioners is urged in a report made public yesterday by the Advisory Committee on Education.

Serious limitation of the authority of the Board of Education, and an antiquated school code were cited as the chief stumbling blocks in a progressive school system, which still, according to the report, compares favorably with the systems of other cities the size of Washington.

Urged New Grants

The report was written by Lloyd E. Blauch, educational specialist on the advisory committee, and Dr. J. Orrin Powers, for many years a professor in the George Washington school of education.

The advisory committee, appointed by the President in 1936, was asked first to study Federal aid for vocational education, and later to investigate the whole subject of Federal relations to State and local education. Their general report to the President, which was turned over to Congress in February, urged new Federal grants for State and local purposes, starting with $70,000,000 in 1939, and increasing to $199,000,000 in 1944.

Congress Rule Attacked

At that time the committee asked enactment of a comprehensive code of basic legislation for the District, urged greater local control over the school system, and condemned the practice of rider-legislation. On these points, the committee followed the conclusions of Blauch and Powers, and it publishes the remainder of their findings with the reservation that "the statements and conclusions are those of the authors, and do not necessarily conform to those of the committee."

In studying the school system, the authors found the Board of Education had been narrowly restricted by legislation and by their subordinate position to the Commissioners.

While recommending that a thorough survey of the school system be made by a group of outside experts to help Congress in maintaining the "proper relationship" with public education in the District, the report

350 Americans On Liner in Gale; 7 Ships Rush Aid

First Vessels Due at Daybreak Flames Are Reported Under Control Crew Fights 2 Hours; Started With Blast German Ship Due in New York Friday

List of Passengers, Page 9.

Copyright, 1938, by the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 25.—Fire sweeping below decks of the German liner Deutschland imperilled the lives of 1,000 persons tonight in a north Atantic storm off Newfoundand before it was controlled.

After several hours of fire-fighting, the captain radioed the Associated Press this laconic message:

"Fire under control, expect to proceed at daybreak."

Other ships were steaming through gale-whipped waters 200 miles southeast of Cape Race to her assistance, answering frantic calls for help in the ship's dire need.

Aboard the big ship were 591 passengers and about 400 crew members. Included among the passengers were 350 Americans.

Five passenger liners swung swiftly from their courses to go to the burning ship's aid. United States Coast Guard cutters from as far distant as Boston, 700 miles away, and New London, Conn., put out to sea.

(A radio from the liner Manhattan to the Associated Press said the steamers Collamer, Europe and American Traveler continued to speed toward the Deutschland and that the crippled ship "thanked all others and declined their aid as being too far away.")

Indications were that most of the ships that at first started toward the burning boat turned back to their courses.

A Drama in Heavy Seas

Heavy seas and rains buffeted both the beleaguered liner and the ships offering succor.

Off Newfoundland—the Deutschland reported her position as 200 miles southeast of Cape Race—a southeaster was raging. High, choppy waves were battering the ship as she fought for her life in the night.

Capt. Carl Steincke, the Deutschland's veteran master, sent out his first alarm at 6:22 p. m. (E. S. T.),

There had been an explosion in a compartment of number 2 hold.

Flames and smoke swept upward in a sudden blast. The ship's fire squads rushed into the battle.

Above, the passengers were in the cocktail lounges, at dinner, dancing.

The crew's first attack on the fire failed. The flames spread. Capt. Steincke ordered every available sailor into the fight.

It was not the first time the 15-year-old ship had lived through a fire. Eight years ago a fire broke out at sea and was extinguished without a passenger being the wiser.

This fight, though, was not so tame. The firefighters were driven back for a time.

Seven Ships Answer Aid Call

Capt. Steincke radioed nearby ships: "Assistance necessary urgently."

Then the liners put about to the rescue. Those which reported they were going to the Deutschland were:

The American S. S. Manhattan, 247 miles west, speed 22½ knots.
The French S. S. Minerva, 90 miles west, 11 knots.
The American Traveller, 110 miles northeast, 15 knots.
The American S. S. Collamer, 86 miles east, 12 knots.
The S. S. American Farmer, 144 miles southeast, 15 knots.
The British S. S. Laconia, 290 miles southeast, 19 knots.
The Norwegian S. S. Europe, 76 miles distant, 12 knots.

Then, at 8:15 p. m., Capt. Steincke radioed the Associated Press: "Fire under control."

Within half an hour, the Boston office of the Hamburg-American line had received confirmation of this report. But there was no immediate indication that the rescue ships would stop their race to the Deutschland.

Neither was there any immediate indication as to how serious was the damage.

The master's first cryptic "under control" report, received in the New York office of the Associated Press at 8:29 p. m., was reiterated in a radio message intercepted by the Coast Guard here at 11:35 p. m.

The message was directed from the Deutschland to the Canadian salvage tug Foundation Franklin, as it sped to the rescue with the advice that it carried "full fire-fighting equipment."

The Deutschland replied:

Due in New York Friday

The Coast Guard had warmed up a large amphibian plane under command of Lieut. George Miller to fly to rescue direction work but canceled its plans on receipt of the message to the Foundation Franklin.

The Deutschland, which left Hamburg October 20 and Cherbourg the following day, was due at her Hudson River pier at 9 a. m., Friday.

As soon as the fire broke out, the ship canceled all its wireless service, reserving its radio equipment solely for emergency work.

Its radio staff operated constantly, keeping in direct contact with all rescue ships and the mainland.

At 9:15 p. m. (E. S. T.), the Canadian Press reported, the radio branch of the Department of Marine at Halifax was informed that the ship was permitting resumption of its regular wireless operations.

Because of the storm, it was considered unlikely that any of the rescue ships could reach the Deutschland before daybreak.

The New York office of the United States Weather Bureau said the area in which the Deutschland reported herself was whipped by a heavy rain as well as strong winds but that a clearing could be expected about 4 a. m. (E. S. T.), just before dawn.

As soon as the Deutschland's first distress signal was received, ships along the Atlantic Coast voluntarily observed a "quiet period" to permit uninterrupted broadcasts from the burning vessel.

Her skipper carefully gave the position:

"44.09 north; 47.27 west."

This was repeated to reduce the danger of misunderstanding.

The National Broadcasting Co. reported at 10:12 (E. S. T.) that the

Tugwell, Moley Debate 3d Term For President

Both 'Brain Trusters' Former Says 'Yes' Later Declares 'No'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 25.—Two former members of the New Deal "brain trust" met today in public discussion of the question: "Shall we break with tradition in a third term for President?"

They were Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, chairman of the New York City planning commission, who said a third term was a good idea, and Dr. Raymond Moley, professor of law at Columbia University, who said it wasn't.

The opponents, both close advisors to President Roosevelt in his first term, met on the platform at the New York Herald Tribune Forum on Current Problems.

Dr. Tugwell said he believed the "moral" opposition to a third term "comes almost wholly from those who think Government, and especially its Executive branch, ought to be kept weak."

Dr. Moley asserted that a "mere disclaimer" of a desire for more power was not sufficient, declaring: "The only disclaimer that deserves credence is renunciation."

Dictatorship a "Bogey"

Dr. Tugwell asserted that talk of dictatorship was raised only as "a bogey" and added that there was a dominance of a small group of "willful men" in the Senate of which little ever was heard.

Said Dr. Morley: "The two-term custom is no moss-covered fetish. It is still what pendants call 'the sense' of the people. It can defeat those who might challenge it, just as it defeated those who dared to challenge it in the past."

Speaking from the same platform, Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the journal of the American Medical Association, and Dr. Richard A. Cabot, professor emeritus of clinical medicine at the Harvard Medical School, debated the comparative merits of group medical practice and private medicine.

Dr. Fishbein said group practice had proved more costly than private practice, "particularly for the 85 per cent of diseases which are competently diagnosed by any family doctor, with the amount of equipment that he can carry in a hand bag."

He criticized a recent report of the interdepartmental committee on health and welfare, created by Congress on President Roosevelt's order, which called for a national health program at an annual expenditure of $850,000,000 and the creation of a compulsory sickness insurance plan to cover the entire population.

Cabot Favors Group Idea

"Obviously such an agency, once created," Dr. Fishbein said, "may well create a bureaucracy with 300,000 to 500,000 employes for its maintenance. The concept is the most far-reaching entrance of Government into the personal life of every citizen that has ever been contemplated in this or any other country."

Dr. Cabot said he favored group medicine for the following reasons:

"The patient of the private physician can rarely afford to pay for the machines, the tests and the consultations for diagnosis which in group practice he gets for comparatively small yearly subscriptions.

"For the physician, group practice is preferable because it gives him a chance to grow professionally, to do and to enjoy a high grade of medical work and to earn an income which is sufficient and secure."

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, scientist, declared the American voter must learn "to discount completely the man, whoever he is, who talks glibly about social justice and helping the common man as though nothing were involved other than an attitude of good will."

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, said the sending of Nazi, Fascist and Communist agents into the United States by Germany, Italy and Russia was "in keeping with the new methods of undeclared war which foreign nations have evolved."

Maj. Brown to Tell Churchmen of Boys Club

Activities of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club will be illustrated by moving pictures and discussed by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, at a dinner meeting of the Laymen's League of the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G street northwest, today at 6:30 p. m.

Harmonica music and boxing, furnished by boys from clubs No. 2 and No. 5, will follow Maj. Brown's talk, Richard E. Shands, vice president of the league, said.

D. C. Justices Named For Coal Act Test

Chief Justice Groner, of the District Court of Appeals, yesterday designated Associate Justices Shephens and Miller to sit with Chief Justice Wheat, of District Court, at trial of the city of Atlanta's action to have the national bituminous coal act declared unconstitutional.

The law requires that three Federal judges hear a direct attack on validity of a statute.

Political Arena

Beaumont, Calif., Oct. 25 (AP).—M. B. Wellington, chairman of a Republican committee of nine, said today he had sent telegrams to Washington officials asking for an investigation of Representative Harry R. Sheppard (Democrat), of the Nineteenth Congressional District "to ascertain if he had violated the corrupt practices act."

SHEPPARD

Wellington said his committee had uncovered evidence that civil service rules had been disregarded in San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange counties, and that "assessments in excess of 10 per cent of annual salaries have been levied upon postmasters in the district for the support of Sheppard's re-election to Congress."

A telegram to Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, charged that Ed L. Wingert, WPA executive in San Bernardino County, is coercing relief clients into voting for incumbent Congressman Sheppard."

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 25 (AP). Roy Wallace withdrew from the race for Governor of Tennessee today with an announcement he planned to devote his attention to promotion of a $20 a week pension plan.

"The aged, the needy and the unemployed need bread more than they need a Governor, he said. He was running as an independent candidate.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 25 (AP). Assistant United States Attorney Thorn Lord today announced that evidence of alleged "fraudulent registration" here would be presented to the Department of Justice in Washington tomorrow.

Lord said William F. Smith, another assistant United States attorney, would ask the Department of Justice to assign "at least ten" agents to investigate Atlantic County's election machinery.

Among those who conferred with Lord was United State Senator William H. Smathers, who charged there were several thousand false entries on the county's registration books.

Lord said the "evidence" presented to him included:

Fifty-three persons registered from a medium-sized house owned by the father of the girl who works in a county office.

Thirty-four transient chorus girls registered from one house, and 21 from another. Senator Smathers said the chorines "departed with the summer."

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 25.—At last the Democratic Party has a candidate for Congress from the Eighth North Carolina District.

With W. O. Burgin and C. B. Deane locked in a contest ever since the primary election, and when it appeared the seat might go to the Republican candidate, John R. Jones, by default, three arbitrators today found in favor of Burgin. Judge W. C. Harris, in Superior Court, before whom the contest has been waged, said he would issue a consent order to end the litigation, and the State board of elections arranged to meet here tomorrow to certify Burgin as the nominee.

Burgin led by 100 votes in the primary but Deane overtook him in a recount. Then the litigation was begun.

Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, will discuss the attitude of the Administration toward small business over the Columbia Broadcasting System Friday from 6:45 to 7 p. m., the Republican National Committee said yesterday.

Senator Bridges has entitled his talk "Little Business, What Now?" and his address is one of a series covering issues of the 1938 campaign.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, will deliver the third of a series of four major 1938 campaign addresses at Columbus, Ohio, Saturday evening. His talk, before a Republican rally, will be broadcast coast-to-coast over the Columbia Broadcasting System from 9 to 9:30 p. m. Senator Vandenberg's fourth and last address will be delivered in Kreuger's Auditorium, Newark, N. J., November 2, before a Republican gathering.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 25 (AP).—John B. Chapple, of Ashland, formally asked the attorney general's office today for appointment of special counsel to investigate his charges that Republican leaders tried to force him to withdraw as an independent "Townsend Republican" candidate for the United States Senate.

Chapple asserted that Julius P. Heil, Milwaukee, Republican nominee for Governor and Heil's campaign manager, offered him $2,600 to get out of the race.

The assistant attorney general said he would act on the complaint "very promptly."

Plans to picket Democratic National Committee headquarters here on Saturday as a protest against the administration of Gov. George H. Earle, democratic nominee for the Senate from Pennsylvania, were made public yesterday by the National Union for Collective Bargaining of Democratic Party Workers.

The organization's statement, which said the picket line would be composed of "certified Democratic Party workers" of the Keystone State, also bitterly attacked John B. Kelly, chairman of the Democratic city committee of Philadelphia. "Macing" of relief workers was one of numerous charges in the statement.

Magazine Dealers Open 3-Day Parley

The "pulps" and the "slicks" met on common ground yesterday when the Atlantic Coast Independent Distributors Association, wholesalers of magazines and periodicals in 17 States and the District, opened a three-day meeting at the Hotel Mayflower.

Speakers at the opening session were Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington Herald and Times; Beatrice Lubitz, editor of True Confessions, and Max Annenberg, circulation director of the New York Daily News.

Harry A. Braelow, of Newark, N. J., is president of the organization. Joseph Ottenstein, of Washington, is a member of the board of directors and of the convention committee.

Group Health 'Inevitable,' Says Dr. Wiley

For 'Middle Brackets' Barrier to Socialism Jury Hears Chicagoan

People with middle-bracket incomes have one shining chance to get as good medical treatment as the rich and the poor, and that is in cooperative practice of which Washington's Group Health Association, Inc., is a splendid example, Dr. Charles R. Wiley, director of the Chicago Civic Medical Center, declared yesterday.

Dr. Wiley is a veteran of the wars between established physicians' organizations and the movement to bring modern developments in reach of those who are not objects of charity yet find that they cannot pay their way under the "fee-for-service" system.

He testified before the extraordinary District grand jury which is investigating Department of Justice charges that the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society violated the Sherman antitrust act in their campaign against G. H. A.

His Group a Success

Behind the closed doors of the grand jury room, it was understood, Dr. Wiley gave testimony upon the experiences of his own organization when it was struggling to gain a foothold in Chicago. The Chicago Medical Society expelled some of the civic center's physicians; others quit the society in resentment over the campaign against their unit.

The civic centers, carefully selected staff lost their professorates in Chicago universities, which nearly all had held. Other professional connections were denied them. Hospitals asked them to resign from the staffs. Only one hospital in Chicago now is open to the civic center's patients.

Nevertheless, it was understood, the civic center was described as a firmly established organization, with a professional staff of 19, who treat 5,500 to 6,000 persons a month. The center has treated 28,000 persons since it was started in 1935.

Optician Testifies

Similar acts against G. H. A. are the basis of the Government's claim that the A. M. A. and the district society functioned here as unlawful combinations in restraint of trade and conspired to obstruct justice.

Dr. Wiley was the eighth witness to testify. Beside him yesterday the grand jurors heard Emmett R. Jester, an optician near the G. H. A. headquarters at 1328 I street northwest. He has supplied optical equipment to G. H. A. patients. It was understood that he was questioned about his business in other quarters since his connection with G. H. A.

Dr. Wiley explained at the Mayflower after the grand jury hearing that he believes the development of group practice is inevitable because of the pressure of people who need care but cannot afford it under the present system. He said he regarded group practice as very different from "socialized medicine" and as the strongest barrier against it.

Medical Progress Cited

"But unless our people are able to obtain treatment," he siad, "there is reason to fear regimentation.

"Every thoughtful physician realizes that medicine has made progress in the last 30 or 40 years. Most of that progress has come about through development of specialties, increased use of the laboratory and the X-ray. Individual practice has made the cost beyond the reach of middle-bracket people. The rich have gotten it and the poor. The middle people have gotten it in dire emergencies, and then only by mortgages and the like.

"The present objections of the American Medical Association will not stop the development of group practice; it hinders it, but it will not stop it. But it would be much better if they would step in and regulate the standards of medical care. If they could see their way clear to helping fix the standards for group enterprises, every group medical enterprise, every good group clinic, would welcome it. . . .

"We in Chicago are interested in seeing organized the better type of group health enterprises. That is why we were glad to encourage and to help Group Health Association in Washington. I want to tell you those are good doctors over at Group Health. I spent two and a half hours over there yesterday inspecting their facilities."

The grand jury will resume hearing Washington witnesses today, it was understood.

Sheppard Finds Pennsylvania WPA 'Coercion'

Davis Charge Borne Out $100 Gifts Solicited President Denies Talks

By William V. Nessly.

"Large numbers' of WPA workers in Pennsylvania have been summoned to Democratic Party headquarters and solicited for campaign contributions of $100 each, the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee was informed yesterday by investigators it had sent into the State, Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, committee chairman, announced.

In addition, owners of trucks employed on PWA projects in Carbon County have been solicited for $100 each, and at least four promised contributions, the investigators said.

The revelations came as a result of charges by Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who is opposed for re-election by Gov. George H. Earle. They closely followed publication of a reply by Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, in which the allegations by Davis were termed ridiculous and false.

Day Sees Tempers Rise

This development came in a day marked by rising tempers and increased activity as the national political campaign speeded toward the elections, only two weeks away. Other activities were:

President Roosevelt asserted that he intended to make no campaign speeches aside from the one scheduled for November 4 in the interest of the New York Democratic ticket.

His statement followed a prediction by J. David Stern, Philadelphia publisher, after a White House visit, that the President would act to refute the "canard" that the Pennsylvania Democratic ticket does not have Presidential support.

WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins ordered the opsting by State directors of an official order telling WPA workers they may vote as they please and none will lose his job because of his vote or refusal to give to any campaign fund.

WPA Voting Arranged

Adjustment of working hours so that all on WPA rolls may vote also was ordered.

The Sheppard committee ordered investigators to North Dakota to report on charges by Gov. William Langer, Senate candidate, that WPA workers are being intimidated to vote for Senator Nye (Republican), and Nye's charges that use of absentee ballots is being interfered with.

John D. M. Hamilton, G. O. P. national chairman, declared at Indianapolis that "reckless spending" of the Roosevelt administration is working a hardship on low-income families through indirect taxation.

The Sheppard committee's investigators reported that many WPA workers in Luzerne County (Wilkes-Barre) were called to Democratic headquarters by postal cards and received by a party representative on leave from his job in the State unemployment compensation service. The workers were asked to contribute, some as much as $100 and the investigators have affidavits, they said, that some contributions actually were made.

Tickets Sold for Meetings

Many WPA foremen made a practice of selling tickets to Democratic Party gatherings, according to committee evidence, which was said to show that Charles H. Spangler, chief pay-roll examiner for the State's fifth WPA district, distributed 4,500 such tickets to WPA workers and officials.

Sheppard said the investigation was being continued.

The Pennsylvania incident was discussed by Stern as he left the White House, insisting that President Roosevelt is "four-square" behind the Democratic slate. He said Judge Arthur H. James, Republican nominee for Governor, has spread "utterly false propaganda" regarding warmth of the President's support.

Asked about Stern's prediction that he would take steps to "nail this misrepresentation," the President said at his press conference that it was news to him.

Hopkins Issues Warning

Hopkins' notice to WPA workers that they may vote as they wish, added:

"No supervisor or administrative person may attempt to influence the votes of any worker or solicit contributions for campaign funds from the people who work under him. Anyone who uses his position with the WPA in that way to influence the votes of others by threat or intimidation will be dismissed."

Hamilton, Republican chairman, before a State-wide meeting of Indiana women party workers, charged the New Deal's "reckless spending" cost taxpayers one-fifth of their annual incomes.

"Reckless expenditure by Government, deficit-financing and high taxation," he declared, "soon means unbalanced family budgets, less good food on your tables and less clothing of good quality for you to wear."

Later he predicted to newsmen the G. O. P. would "pick up around 30 to 40 seats in Congress—maybe 45" in agricultural areas this November. He listed expected Senate gains at "about six" and possible gubernatorial successes in "three or four of the big States and four or five of the smaller."

Strachey Free To Enter U. S., but Can't Lecture

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—John Strachey British Leftist author and lecturer, was released from Ellis Island today although he lost a suit for his freedom under a writ of habeas corpus.

Federal Judge Edward A. Conger, dismissing the writ obtained by Strachey's lawyers, placed the author under $500 bond and an injunction to deliver no lectures, but said he could leave Ellis Island where he has been detained since he came to this country with an invalidated passport visa two weeks ago.

The peculiar twist of developments, which gave Strachey his liberty when his writ was dismissed, was due to the fact that he gave notice of intention to appeal from the order barring him from the United States. The bond was posted pending the appeal.

The Gallup Poll

First Voters Favor Democrats But They Are Less Strong for Roosevelt

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Oct. 25.—The 4,000,000 young men and women who have come of voting age since 1936 and will be eligible to cast their first vote in a national election November 8 are more in sympathy with the Democratic Party than the Republican Party in the Congressional contests, according to a survey of "first voters" just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GALLUP.

The voting intentions of the young are of major significance to the future of the political parties because, to perpetuate itself in power, a party must be able to appeal successfully to the young generation in order to draw new blood into its ranks. The voting intentions of the new crop, as appraised by the Institute survey, show the following division of sentiment on major party candidates for the House:

First Voters
Intend to vote Democratic... 55%
Intend to vote Republican... 45%

Their attitude is in marked contrast to that of voters in the older age group—50 years and over—who are pro-Republican by a slight majority (52 per cent).

One of the chief problems of the Republican Party is to win over the annual crop of young voters, the majority of whom have been brought up in the Democratic tradition during the six years of the New Deal. Keenly aware of this problem, many Republican strategists are hailing the emergence of younger men in the party, such as Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts, as a drawing card for the young vote.

The Republicans can take some comfort in the fact that the very youngest voters today are a little less New Deal in sentiment, so far as the Congressional election is concerned, than those just ahead of them in age—the persons who will be eligible to vote in a national election for the second time in their lives next month. The difference is approximately 3 percentage points. That difference is not large in itself, but it may possibly represent the beginning of a trend back to the G. O. P. in the younger age groups, especially if taken in conjunction with one additional fact.

President Roosevelt is less popular today with the 4,000,000 men and women who have come to voting age in the last two years than he is with the 4,000,000 who came to voting age between 1934 and 1936.

Institute studies show, for example, that 68 per cent of the second voters are for him today, as compared to 61 per cent of the first voters — indicating slightly less New Deal sentiment among the very youngest group in the voting population.

Cox Suggests Reviving Law On Pedestrians

Act Passed in 1926 Would Amend if Needed Public Debate Planned

By Howard F. Wentworth.

The District Commissioners will be petitioned to order enforcement of existing, half-forgotten laws governing pedestrian traffic before carrying out announced intentions of holding public hearings on proposed methods of controlling careless walkers, it was reported last night.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the Commissioners' special committee on traffic safety, said he would ask the city heads to take advantage of a long-standing Congressional act—on the books since 1926—which provides for pedestrian observance of traffic rules.

Past Efforts Ignored

His request will mark the third time that the special committee, appointed during the summer as an "emergency" safety measure, has advocated control of pedestrians. Previous recommendations have been ignored.

"I see no reason," said Gen. Cox, "why the present law should not be enforced. If changes are necessary, they should be made. Insofar as safety is concerned, pedestrians should be required to abide by rules the same as motorists."

A rising pedestrian death toll is rapidly forcing Washington from the national safety picture, said Gen. Cox, and immediate action must be taken if the fatality rate is to be curbed.

Decision to throw the current controversy anent pedestrian control open for public discussion was announced yesterday following a meeting at the home of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Confined to his home with a cold, Hazen met with Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., to plot a program of preventing further loss of life on Washington streets.

Date of the scheduled public hearing will be announced later, Hazen said. Both individuals and organizations were urged to prepare views for presentation.

Hazen and McCoach have approved pedestrian control laws "in principle," but have declined to offer definite suggestions.

Numerous efforts have been made by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to combat the city death rate with pedestrian laws, and similar recommendations were included in the first report of Hazen's special committee.

Traffic Victim's Throat Cut

Paul Henyon, 17, of 2419 Third street northeast, was in critical condition at Casualty Hospital last night after a three-car collision.

Police said John LaFort, 28, of 5219 Fifth street northwest, driving by the 5300 block of Illinois avenue northwest, hit the rear left fender of a sedan which was about to back into a parking space. LaFort's car glanced into the path of an auto operated by William H. Woodfield, 26, of 724 Nineteenth street northwest.

In the head-on collision, Henyon, riding with Woodfield, was hurled through the windshield. His throat was slashed and skull fractured.

Driver Dies at Wheel

Whether another death will be added to Washington's traffic toll hinged last night on the outcome today of a coroner's inquest into the death of Daniel Muntyan, 67-year-old native of Serbia, found dead at the wheel of his car, which crashed into a truck.

Witnesses said the automobile careened crazily down the street, narrowly missing a streetcar before the crash, leading Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald to believe Muntyan might have suffered a heart attack. Muntyan owned and operated a delicatessen shop and rooming house at 1916 I street northwest for the past 21 years.

The automobile crashed into the rear of a large trailer truck in the 2600 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast. Charles Jenkins, driver of the truck, was not hurt. Little damage was done to either vehicle.

Muntyan and his wife, who came to America with him 27 years ago, drove to Washington from their home at Bowie, Md., on business. He had been forced to retire from active work three years ago by a heart ailment and had left Washington two months ago, Mrs. Ida P. Strang, who operates Muntyan's house on I street, said.

Well known as a wood carver and cabinet maker, Muntyan was known to hundreds of Washingtonians as "Pop." One of his wood carvings, an arch, was used in the Carnegie Music Hall in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Muntyan was a Scottish Rite member of the Masons. His wife is his only survivor.

$2,000 Vanishes, Wardman Park Cashier Is Held

William F. Hutton, 30, cashier of Wardman Park Hotel, was held by police last night pending an investigation of the contents of a safe deposit box in Newark, N. J.

Hutton was arrested at the Greyhound bus terminal early yesterday on a warrant issued in connection with the disappearance of more than $2,000 cash and valuables from the hotel vault. He lives at 2022 Connecticut avenue northwest.

No charges have been placed against Hutton. He did, however, sign a confession that he took money and the jewelry of Col. William A. Carlton from the hotel's business office, according to police, and he had more than $700 in his possession when arrested.

Police here learned of the safe deposit box in Newark and immediately wired authorities there to hold whatever it contained. Capt. Ira E. Keck said the box held many thousand dollars worth of securities and traveling checks.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out the wrong fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for indigestion.

Capital Greets Motors Parade Of Progress

Caravan Met at Line 25 Trucks in Fleet Exhibit to Be Set Up

A caravan of 25 streamlined, red and silver trucks—the largest mass truck fleet movement on record—rolled into Washington yesterday with tons of equipment for the General Motors Parade of Progress Exposition opening tonight on grounds at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

With a personnel of more than 50 men, the caravan was greeted at the District line by Francis G. Addison, president of the Washington Board of Trade—sponsor of the event—and several District officials.

Covering more than 2,000,000 miles throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico during the past three years, the exposition has visited 197 cities and has been witnessed by more than 5,000,000 persons.

John M. Jerpe, director of the exposition, said the entire tour has been without mishap—not a fender on the huge, oval-topped transports has been scratched and not a member of the organization has been injured in the many miles of highway travel.

The exposition combines a preview of the future and an exhibit of past achievements in the fields of motoring inventions, highway safety, automobile manufacturing and developments of the machine age on the road and in the home.

A tented city will rise on the downtown square opposite the Department of Commerce. The exposition will be open to the public daily and nightly for a week.

Jitter-Bugs On Hell's Path, Bishop Warns

Calls 'Swing' Debauchery Modern Art Debasing Urges Church to Act

By the Associated Press.

Biloxi, Miss., Oct. 25.—Jam sessions and jitterbug "orgies" are wooing young people "along the primrose path to hell," the Most Rev. Francis J. L. Beckman, Archbishop of Dubuque, tonight told the National Council of Catholic Women.

The archbishop's address, dealing with "Art for Youth and the Church," was read by the Right Rev. Mgr. T. Conroy, vicar general of Dubuque.

Pleading for action by the church, the archbishop said in the paper that "evil forces" were fostering a type of art "embodying evil and malicious propaganda."

"Today," he said, "while the church pursues as zealously as ever she has in the past her policy of motivating, conserving and drawing to herself the best of modern art, evil forces are hard at work endeavoring to undermine its Christian status, debauch its high purpose and harness it to serve individual diabolical ends."

"Under the captions of sur-realism, neopaganism, etc., we find whole groups and organizations fostering within our very borders a type of art embodying evil and malicious propaganda as its central core," Archbishop Beckman said.

"A degenerated and demoralizing 'musical' system is given a disgusting christening as 'swing' and turned loose to gnaw away the moral fiber of young people."

President Calls Dies Inquiry False, Unfair

Dies

Sloan and William Knudsen, of General Motors, by Walter P. Chrysler, of Chrysler Motors, and other motor magnates. He then jabbed at the committee again:

"Most fair-minded Americans hope that the committee will abandon the practice of merely providing a forum to those who for political purposes, or otherwise, seek headlines which they could not otherwise obtain."

The statement was without immediate precedent in history. Presidents, according to the record, seldom have criticized Congressional committee at work, and never in the scathing, sarcastic language used by the President.

Response Is Quick

There was quick response to the Presidential statement.

Chairman Dies, returning late last night from New York, said that while he "deeply regretted the President's bitter attack upon a committee of an independent Congress" he would continue to do his duty "undeterred and unafraid."

Dies said he had known "from the beginning that neither the President nor his advisers favored this investigation."

Gov. Murphy, at Kalamazoo, told the United Press that testimony against him before the committee was "clearly a planned attempt to win an election." He charged the Dies Committee with having stopped investigating facts and becoming a political instrumentality in the campaign, in which honest and progressive government is at stake."

His opponent, the former Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, declared the President had reversed his "purge" process to keep in office in Michigan a man "he does like," while in other States he had sought to defeat men "he did not like." He said the State Communist Party had indorsed Murphy and opposed him, and added "that action certainly was not influenced by the Dies Committee."

Perkins Impeachment Asked

President Roosevelt's blast followed another day of strong charges made before the committee. Chairman Martin Dies, of Texas, self-styled "President of the Demagog Club of Congress," heard a witness, Harper Knowles, American Legion official of Oakland, Calif., declare Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins "guilty of gross malfeasance of office and dereliction of duty" in administering immigration laws.

Knowles accused Secretary Perkins of "coddling alien criminals," saying that her conduct was "notorious."

He and other witnesses have charged repeatedly before the committee that Secretary Perkins should long ago have deported Harry Bridges, West Coast leader of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Secretary Perkins has often defended herself against the charge.

Knowles demanded that Congress investigate his charges so that Secretary Perkins would be "impeached."

Knowles and Ray Nimmo, of Los Angeles, charged that Communist activity was directed on the West Coast primarily at agriculture, and this was a "forerunner" of attempts to overthrow the Government.

Writers Congress Accused

Knowles charged that the American Students Union was a communistic group, mentioning their "peace strikes."

Nimmo charged that the Western Writers Congress was of Communist origin and Communist-controlled. Sponsors for this Congress, he said, included Dorothy Parker, feminine wit and verse writer; John Steinbeck, author; Upton Sinclair, author and pamphleteer, and Humphrey Cobb, author.

As the committee continued to receive testimony naming persons all over the country as "known Communists," denials continued to pour in. From San Francisco came immediate heated denial by Alvin Kullberg and Julius D. White, named yesterday as Communists by Knowles. From Sioux Falls, S. Dak., came an air-mailed characterization of Communistic charges as "ridiculous" by the South Dakota Progressive Federation. The federation said it welcomed the fullest possible investigation of its activities.

Besides Dies, who was a leader of the unsuccessful House attempt to kill the President's wage-hour legislation, the committee includes Representatives Dempsey, of New Mexico; Joe Starnes, of Alabama; Harold G. Mosier, of Ohio, and Arthur D. Healey, of Massachusetts, all Democrats. Healey and Dempsey have not participated since the earliest sessions. Starnes conducted the hearing yesterday and left for Alabama in midafternoon.

The President on 'Red' Charges

The text of President Roosevelt's statement on charges against Gov. Murphy of Michigan, before the Dies committee, follows:

At his press conference this afternoon, one of the newspapermen asked the President the following question:

"Mr. President, are you concerned with the testimony that has been given before the Dies Committee, particularly in the case of Gov. Murphy of Michigan? Testimony last week charged him with treasonable activities in the settlement of the sit-down strikes in Michigan two years ago."

The President: "Yes, I certainly am concerned with that kind of testimony. I would like to say something about it, but I think it probably would be better if I wrote something out instead of trying to talk extemporaneously."

Dictates Statement

Later, the President dictated the following statement for the press:

"I was very much disturbed. I was disturbed not because of the absurdly false charges made by a coterie of disgruntled Republican officeholders against a profoundly religious, able and law-abiding Governor; but because a Congressional committee charged with the responsibility of investigating un-American activities should have permitted itself to be used in a flagrantly unfair and un-American attempt to influence an election.

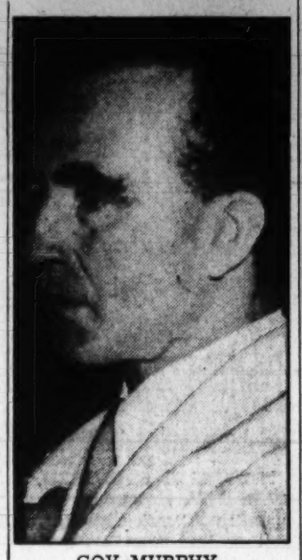
"At this hearing the Dies Committee hade no effort to get at the truth, either by calling for facts to support mere personal opinion or by allowing facts and personal opinion on the other side. On the threshold of a vitally important gubernatorial election, they permitted a disgruntled Republican judge, a discharged Republican city manager and a couple of officious police officers to make lurid charges against Gov. Frank Murphy, without attempting to elicit from them facts as to their undeniable bias and their charges and without attempting to obtain from the Governor or, for that matter, from any responsible motor manufacturer, their version of the events.

"Gov. Murphy's painstaking and statesmanlike efforts to bring about a settlement of the sit-down strikes and to avert bloodshed and riot were not shrouded in secrecy. Every important move he made was communicated to the motor manufacturers and the union leaders affected, and was reported fully in the daily press. I received almost daily reports on the situation from the Governor.

Court Order Postponed

"Gov. Murphy never said a word in condemnation of the sit-down strike or any illegal practice. But the Governor was informed by responsible officials of the National Guard that any attempt on the part of the National Guard forcibly to eject the sit-down strikers at Flint would result in bloodshed and riot. Knowing these facts the Governor labored in the open, in the American way, to bring about a prompt settlement of the labor trouble without resort to force.

"Gov. Murphy always insisted that the lawful order of the court must be obeyed. But knowing that negotiations for settlement were proceeding and that precipitous efforts to enforce the court order would result in violence which would disrupt peaceful negotiations, he requested the sheriff to postpone the enforcement of the court order over the week-end. For that act a few petty politicians accuse him of treason; for that act every peace-loving American should praise him.



GOV. MURPHY

"By Wednesday of the week following Gov. Murphy's request for a temporary postponement of the enforcement of the court order, the strike—which was probably the most alarming strike which ever occurred in this country—was brought to an end without the loss of a single life. That was a great achievement of a great American. Gov. Murphy's great accomplishment elicited the commendation of all the important motor manufacturers involved, of Mr. Sloan and Mr. Knudsen, of General Motors; of Mr. Chrysler, of Chrysler Motors, and of the Fisher brothers of the Fisher Body Corporation; of Mr. Barrett, of Hudson Motors, and of Mr. Graham, Graham Motors.

A True American

"In handling the dangerous labor situation in Michigan in the dark days of 1937, Gov. Murphy, as a true American, was concerned not only with the letter but the spirit of the law. Gov. Murphy accordingly strove, and strove successfully, to effectuate a settlement not by force, but by reason—a settlement which would satisfy not merely the letter of the law, but the community's sense of right and of justice.

"Most fair-minded Americans hope that the committee will abandon the practice of merely providing a forum to those who, for political purposes or otherwise, seek headlines which they could not otherwise obtain. Mere opinion evidence has been barred in court since the American system of legislative and judicial procedure was started.

"Three weeks ago the civilized world was threatened by the immediate outbreak of a world war. Cool heads pleaded for the continuance of negotiations. People may properly differ as to the result of such negotiations, but the fact remains that bloodshed was averted.

"In the winter of 1937 Gov. Murphy was confronted with the same kind of situation on a smaller scale. He knew that if negotiations were broken off bloodshed was inevitable. He worked successfully for the continuation of the negotiations. As a result of his fine leadership there is no doubt that hundreds and even thousands of human lives were saved. That is the American way of doing things."

Wage Law Provisions Are Outlined

hourly rate. Employes, the division intimated, are entitled to overtime hourly rates for four hours of the 48.

6. Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews can fix hourly minimum rates for particular industries ranging between 25 and 40 cents up to October 24, 1939. Thereafter, special rates can be fixed ranging between 30 and 40 cents per hour. This will be done after a committee named for the industry has recommended a special rate. Hearings must be held on the committee's recommendation.

Apprentice Rates

7. Special rates thus arrived at will terminate October 24, 1945, and a flat 40-cent minimum will become effective, unless the administrator finds, "by a preponderance of the evidence," that continuance of the lower special rate is necesary to prevent "substantial curtailment of employment in the industry."

8. Under certain conditions, certificates can be obtained from the administrator permitting payment of less than the minimum wage to apprentices, messengers and handicapped persons, where lower wages are necessary to prevent curtailment of employment opportunities. Handicapped persons shall not be paid less than 75 per cent of the minimum.

9. Allowance can be made, in computing the minimum wage, for the cost to the employer of board, lodging or other facilities extended to employes. Tools or materials, however, cannot be included in determining the minimum wage. Moreover, scrip, or any means of payment which would compel the employe to trade at a company commissary, is not regarded as a proper means of payment.

10. Although the wage and hour division is not at this time calling for reports from employers, full records are required as to names of employes, home addresses, dates of birth if under 19 years of age, hours of work, wages and pay days. Division officials can enter premises and inspect records. The division and industry committees are given full subpena power. Employers are advised to use time clocks, cards or sheets to keep an exact record of hours.

Child-Labor Provision

11. Employment of children under 16 years of age, and of children under 18 years in any occupation classed as hazardous or detrimental to health or well-being, is prohibited. Children 14 and 15 years of age may be employed in occupations other than manufacturing and mining, which the Labor Department Children's Bureau has ruled do not interfere with schooling, health or well-being. A certificate obtained from the Children's Bureau will afford protection against court action.

12. Certain employers, such as those engaged in the first processing of dairy products and certain other farm commodities and rialways, motorbus and truck carriers under regulation by the Interstate Commerce Commission, are subject only to the minimum wage requirements. Partial exemption from the hour provisions is ermitted employers in the seasonal occupations. Employers entering into collective-bargaining agreements with representatives of employes certified as bona fide by the National Labor Relations Board are exempt from the overtime requirement if hours worked are limited to 1,000 in 26 weeks or 2,000 in a year.

School Study Urges Power For D.C. Board

Education

stated flatly this relationship could not exist as long as Congress continued, frequently through riders, to legislate, on matters that should be decided by the Board of Education.

"Congressional legislation on details of policy is not justified by sound principles of government and administration," they said, adding that subcommittees of the House and Senate appropriations committees had become the main policy-making agencies for the District school system.

Warning that much of the basic school legislation was now outmoded, the report called for a complete school code, delegating ample authority to the board of education to maintain and operate a complete school system without petty and detailed restrictions.

"It should be the policy of Congress to keep hands off the school system except insofar as broad policies are involved," the investigator declared.

What authority Congress has left the board of education is shared with the Commissioners, the report showed, since the latter control expenditures for schools, veto budget estimates, purchase school sites and direct buildings, and supervise the school health program.

This overlapping of function, it was found, has been a source of irritation and dissatisfaction and the report suggested that "local control of the school system is lacking in many respects because of restrictions imposed upon the municipal government by Congress."

"These considerations support the conclusion that a thoroughgoing reorganization and modernization of the District government would greatly simplify the problem of effective organization of the school system."

This effective organization, the investigators stated, would be possible only if the board had full corporate power, including the controls now held by the Commissioners, and if the residents of the District were given full local autonomy in the conduct of the schools they pay for.

Lyle Talbot Burned Saving Guest in Fire

Severely Injured May End Career Leaped 20 Feet

By the Associated Press.

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 25.—Screen Actor Lyle Talbot played a real life hero's role today as he dragged his house guest to safety in a fire that destroyed his $50,000 residence, but the act of bravery may end his career before the cameras.

Talbot was critically burned about the hands, face and head, and his hair was burned from his scalp.

Trapped by flames on the second floor with his guest, Franklin D. Parker, also an actor, Talbot, although groggy from smoke and fumes, dragged the unconscious Parker from a bedroom to a narrow ledge, from which firemen later rescued him. Talbot leaped 20 feet to the ground after flames cut off his escape from the second floor. Witnesses said Talbot's pajamas were in flames as he leaped from a window.

Parker suffered severe burns on his back. Both men were taken to the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, where doctors said their condition was critical.

Police said they learned a party had been in progress at Talbot's home until early this morning and that the fire started after all the guests had departed except Parker, who was asked to spend the night. The flames started on the first floor, probably from a cigarette.

The only things saved from the blaze were the wardrobes of Talbot and his wife, Marguerite Cramer, who is in Mexico on a holiday. In Mrs. Talbot's closet firemen recovered a sock into which had been stuffed more than $1,000 in cash and jewelry valued at several thousands of dollars.

From Talbot's bedroom firemen took to safety 40 suits of clothes, 100 dress shirts, more than 400 neckties and scores of pairs of shoes.

Talbot's real name is Lysle Hollywood. He was born in Pittsburgh 34 years ago. He has appeared in scores of movies, "Oil for the Lamps of China," "One Night of Love," and "Mary Stevens, M. D.," among them.

3 D. C. Judges To Decide Just What Scotch Is

Three United States justices will ascend the bench in District Court on November 7 and address their judicial attention to the following question of great concern to the national palate:

What is Scotch whisky?

Thus forthrightly the issue has been presented by the William Jameson Co., of New York, in a ponderous lawsuit filed yesterday. Hanging on this issue as by a thread, the complaint said, are the United States Constitution, the Code of Laws of the United States, the authority of Secretary Morgenthau, the sound judgment of Wilford S. Alexander, Federal alcohol administrator; the powers of James H. Moyle, commissioner of customs, and the sanctity of $850,000 worth of investments.

Alco mixed up is a whopping-big shipment of Scotch (or maybe not) whisky now sequestered in the New York customs house.

The whisky, the company says, is Scotch and it ought to know because it's been blending Scotch whisky for more years than you could say in one gulp.

No, indeed, Morgenthau, Alexander and Moyle told the company. That isn't Scotch whisky. Our regulations, they said, in effect, define Scotch and this stuff doesn't conform to our standards. That's just whisky and you can't bring it into the country. Against our regulations, you know.

Then your regulations are unconstitutional, snapped the company, and we're going to sue you. We'll get an injunction. So, about six pounds of legal papers were filed with Col. Clarence Stewart, the court clerk, yesterday.

Chief Justice Wheat set the hearing for November 7.

President to Start Building Airport, Ends Site Debate

Airport

subject both to fogs and floods have been raised as objections.

Recommending Gravelly Point as the proper location for a close-in airport, the National Airport Commission, composed of Representatives in Congress and various Federal agencies, urged construction of a great national terminal at Camp Springs, Md. Naval officials pointed out, however, that a flying field there would interfere with reception at the Navy's radio station at nearby Cheltenham, while civic leaders and aeronautical experts declared the distance of the proposed terminal from the business districts of the National Capital would prevent its use by commercial airlines.

The proposal was definitely shelved last June when Representative Scott (Democrat), of California, introduced a joint resolution in the House for an investigation of the matter.

When the resolution was introduced vague charges were being made that Government officials had negotiated options on lands in the Camp Springs site.

While the debate on the Camp Springs measure was going on, another bill providing for the closing of Military road, crossing Washington Airport, was passed in an effort to improve operating conditions at the present terminal.

Although Military road now has been closed, Washington Airport is still deemed unsuitable by some aviation authorities because of its small size and the fact that operations can be carried on with maximum safety only on the long north-south runway.

With the construction of the terminal at Gravelly Point it is expected that an airport adequate to the needs of the National Capital "95 per cent of the time" will be provided.

Consideration is still being given to proposals for development of another field on the outskirts of the city for use when fog or storm makes operations at Gravelly Point inadvisable.

workers were idle was "quite a little exaggerated."

Strikes at Newspapers

President Roosevelt also referred to the pecan-shelling industry's shutdowns, which Julius Seligman, president of the National Pecan Shellers of America, Monday told Andrews could not meet the new 25-cent-an-hour wage floor.

The fact that this industry virtually stopped operations is no indication that it is going to quit business, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters.

The President said that some people always were affected by social legislation and added that it would be a good thing if the most reactionary newspaper owners and politicians were to try, as a matter of patriotic duty, to make the statute work.

"American Way" Cited

He added the barbed comment that this group offered no help in getting the wage-hour statute through Congress.

He said everyone favored good wages, but when it came down to a question of legislation to carry them out, objections inevitably are raised on methods. When a critic is asked for a suggestion of his own, the President said the usual reply is that it is not his business.

That, said the President, is much the American way of doing things. Any real progress in social legislation, he said, is a long and tedious business. He concluded by saying again that the practical thing is for all hands to sit down and try to make the legislation work.

Andrews' Funds Short

In his progress report to the President, Administrator Andrews told of his difficulties in providing an adequate staff for enforcement and educational work under the $400,000 appropriation provided by Congress to launch the law.

Andrews declined to estimate what his division will ask in additional funds when Congress returns, saying that was dependent "on how much compliance we get and the size of the field force we will need."

Neither did he advance any proposals for tightening the law, beyond urging continued efforts for a child labor amendment to the Constitution.

"Our law goes a long way toward regulating child labor, but I think a constitutional amendment is still necessary for the law to effect it," he said.

Western Union Waits

Although some complaints of wage-hour act violation were received from employes yesterday, General Counsel Calvert Magruder did not disclose their nature and indicated it may h several days before all of them can be answered.

A decision has yet to be made on applications of telegraph companies for exemptions, on which hearings were held in New York last week. The Postal Telegraph Co. meanwhile went forward with plans to lay off 1,000 messengers. Last week Western Union had said it might have to lay off 3,125 of its approximately 14,000 messengers unless exemptions were granted.

Associated Press dispatches from scattered points continued to indicate that shut-downs as a result of the law were predominantly affecting tobacco steaming plants, pecan shelling operations and some lumber mills, largely in the South. The peanut shelling industry was reported generally complying with the law.

Tobacco Stemmers Hit

Although tobacco stemming workers kept at their jobs were receiving higher wages, suspensions unofficially were said to have thrown 30,000 out of work. Representatives of the stemming industry conferred with Andrews here on possible exemptions.

From Charlotte, N. C., officials of the Textile Workers organizing committee reported virtually all textile manufacturers in that State "eager to co-operate" and only "negligible opposition."

From New York, the United Federal Workers Union, C. I. O. affiliate, charged the Federal Government was violating the wage-hour act in the case of messboys employed aboard Army transports.

At Haverstraw, N. Y., 110 employes of the Long Life Elastic Webbing Co. went on strike protesting wage-hour arrangements under which they said the company proposed to reduce hourly wages to a point where the men would receive no benefits from the time-and-a-half scale of pay for overtime after 44 hours of regular time.

D. C. Board Pledges Aid

The District Minimum Wage Board yesterday pledged full co-operation in administration and enforcement of the Federal Wage-Hour law as it applies to this city.

In a letter to Administrator Elmer Andrews, the board assured him it would "assist in whatever manner possible."

At the same time the board said beauticians renting booths from beauty parlor owners must register today or be classified as employes and hence subject to the $18 weekly basic wage affecting that group.

Several hundred beauticians in the city rent space in beauty parlors, setting themselves up as individual proprietors. Last month the wage board ruled they must receive certification to continue as booth-renters.

U. S. to Purchase Surplus Citrus To Bolster Prices

By the United Press.

The National Citrus Conference of growers and Government officials yesterday completed plans for disposal of 16,000,000 boxes of surplus grapefruit and oranges which threatened to glue the citrus market and send prices crashing to disastrous levels.

Adoption of a co-operative agreement to dispose of 10,000,000 boxes of grapefruit came fewer than 24 hours after the conference agreed to a program to remove 6,000,000 boxes of oranges from commercial channels. Both plans call for Government purchase of surplus, high grade fruit for distribution among the needy.

The Agriculture Department, meantime, announced a $350,000 program to subsidize export and diversion of up to 5,000,000 pounds of surplus pecans.

Britain Urged To Heed U. S. On Palestine

M. P.'s Address Rally
Dr. Weizmann Speaks
States Jews' Position

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Oct. 25.—Zionist leaders and sympathetic members of Parliament tonight appealed to the British government not to betray the Jews and offend the United States by deviating from the policies of the Balfour Declaration and the subsequent League of Nations mandate which were to provide a Jewish national home in Palestine.

With the government expected to make known its future policy in a few days, the Zionist Federation and other Jewish organizations held a mass meeting to protest against reports that Jewish immigration to Palestine will be restricted to appease the Arabs and keep the Jews in a permanent minority.

Among the members of Parliament who spoke was Herbert Morrison, Labor leader, who declared: "It must not be forgotten that Britain is the custodian of a mandate given to it by 52 nations, including the U. S. A., which is closely interested in this matter, and with which great country I am anxious that there shall be no misunderstanding."

U. S. League Cited

Another M. P., R. D. Denman, pointed out that Britain had undertaken an obligation to facilitate immigration to the Jewish national home, rather than to limit immigration. Advising against any default of this international obligation, Denman said:

"People are apt to forget the importance of both the League of Nations and the U. S. A. in this connection."

A third M. P., Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, demanded a Palestine peopled by Jewish patriots who would be loyal to the British empire and to the cause of liberty.

Dr. Chaim Weizman, pioneer Zionist, who is president of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, and president also of the Zionist Federation for Great Britain and Ireland, said:

"We are still ignorant as to what the future policy of the government is to be.

Jewish Policy Stated

"The policy of the Jewish agency is, however, clear. In the first place it is essential that Jewish immigration into Palestine should continue without artificial limitation. More than 300,000 Jews have entered Palestine since the war. They were entitled to put their faith in Britain's word and to believe that the Jewish national home, Palestine, represented a permanent obligation of His Majesty's government. . . .

"The second point in our policy on which we shall remain absolutely immovable is that we can consider no solution which would condemn the Jews to the position of a permanent minority in their national home."

The Very Rev. Dr. Joseph Herman Hertz, chief rabbi of the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Empire, charged that the grand mufti had been permitted to escape to Syria, from where he is "still permitted to direct the rebellion and carry on intrigues with Italy and Germany."

aflame. Airmen described the fires as resembling "huge pyres."

Japanese military authorities said the Chinese had destroyed virtually everything regarded as of possible use to the conquerors—even bridges, thus hampering their own withdrawal.

Commanders close to the city said the Chinese had not broken the dike protecting Hankow from the Han River, a tributary of the Yangtze. They said such sabotage would inflict an untold destruction of life and property.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and his foremost aide—his American educated wife—were said to have left Hankow by plane Monday night, after a mass exodus of other members of the government and civilians.

Well-informed quarters in Shanghai believed Chiang had gone to the mountainous region of southeastern Hunan Province where he might attempt to reorganize his central armies to meet an expected Japanese thrust toward Changsha, Hunan's capital, 180 miles south southwest of Hankow.

Foreigners Warned

Concurrently with the closing in of Japanese Hankow forces, Masayuki Tani, Japanese minister-at-large, in Shanghai conveyed a reiterated warning from the naval command to foreign diplomatic representatives.

The warning, similar to one made last Saturday, urged neutral authorities to see that vessels bearing their flags proceed from Hankow to safer zones in the Yangtze River.

The note said it had been discovered that "many Chinese junks carrying soldiers were moving near neutral ships on the Hankow waterfront."

Tani reiterated that Japan desired to avoid possible incidents and added, "it is difficult to give assurances that Chinese troops who thus take advantage of the presence of neutral vessels will not be attacked by reason of their proximity to such vessels."

Americans on Guard

American sailors from gunboats at Hankow patrolled the former Russian concession to protect American lives and property, while bluejackets from British gunboats undertook to preserve order in the former British concession.

Hankow advices said flames were consuming great areas of the former foreign-controlled districts and the Japanese concession.

According to latest estimates, less than one-fourth of the Wuhan cities' prewar population remained to meet the Japanese conquerors. These estimates put the number at 400,000 persons, including some 1,000 foreigners.

Foreigners in Hankow were said to have been forced to take over administrative duties when Chinese authorities left. The administrative committee included two Americans. Failure of the water supply was one of the gravest problems.

125 From U. S.

[The State Department in Washington reported there were 125 Americans in and around Hankow.

[A telegram from Paul R. Josselyn, American consul general at Hankow, listed the Americans as 82 men, 36 women and 7 children. Of the total, 77 were missionaries, 48 were businessmen, newspaper correspondents, officials, etc., and members of their families.

[Two American gunboats, the Luzon and the Guam, are at the city, and 30 bluejackets from the Luzon landed to protect American lives and interests. They joined with 100 British sailors in policing the former British and Russian concessions, which comprise the refuge of most Americans and British in Hankow. —Editor's note.]

Canton Fire Controlled

Canton, Oct. 25 (AP).—Canton's great fire appeared to be under control today, but soldiers and sailors in the foreign settlement on Shameen Island continued wetting down roofs as a precaution against flying sparks.

Explosions still were heard as flames set off charges of dynamite in Canton, many parts of which had become a looted, burned-out shell. Hotels and shops were ruined by the flames which caused damage running into many millions of dollars.

Irving N. Linnell, American consul general, reported all Americans safe.

Aguirre will be inaugurated next December, after his election has been officially proclaimed.

Aguirre ran on a platform pledging improvement in living conditions, revaluation upward of the peso, better housing for the poor, tax revision, agarian reform, organization of a new nitrate cartel and a curb on Chilean and foreign "imperialism" in industry here.

Duce Incorporates 4 Provinces of Libya Into Italy

Rome, Oct. 26 (Wednesday) (U.P.).—The Fascist Grand Council today decided to incorporate four provinces of Libya into Italy, doing away with colonial status ranking.

A special law is being drafted establishing a new status for Libyan citizens.

The council, it was announced, extended a "special salute" to Japan saying that "owing to the victories at Canton and Hankow . . . the Italian people feel themselves bound toward Japan with a deep and sincere solidarity which is ideological, spiritual and political and has found concrete expression in the Italian-Germany-Japanese (anti-Communist) pact."

Judge Rules Out Bernard Shaw as Clothes Expert

Killarney, Ireland, Oct. 25 (AP).—George Bernard Shaw's kind words for his tailor met with a sarcastic comment from the bench during a damage suit hearing today.

A master tailor of Kenmare, near Killarney, introduced two letters from the Irish playwright as testimony to his skill, in a suit against a farmer.

One letter read: "The clothes have arrived safely and look very smart. The coat fits perfectly. Many thanks."

The judge leaned down from the bench and interposed: "I've noticed that Mr. Shaw wears the most appalling clothes."

Trade Pact Signed

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP).—The recent German-Czechoslovak negotiations for trade expansion between the two countries resulted today in an arrangement by which goods can be shipped duty free between Czechoslovakia and the Sudetenland. Nazis Reported Asking Britain For Colonies

Cabinet Will Meet
Portugal Consulted
African Land Discussed

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 25.—An unofficial outline of sweeping German colonial claims was reliably reported tonight to have reached British ministers for discussion at tomorrow's cabinet meeting along with means of putting into operation the Anglo-Italian Eastern accord.

Return of all Germany's pre-war African colonies—totaling 1,031,839 square miles—or cession of other African territory of equal extent, was said to be the burden of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demands.

Consideration of the colonial problem by Prime Minister Chamberlain and his advisers seemed certain since Defense Minister Oscar Pirow of the Union of South Africa reached Lisbon to sound Portuguese opinion on the matter of Nazi demands before coming on to London.

Pirow said he planned also to visit Berlin soon to talk about the colonial problem. The Union of South Africa is upset by Nazi colonial agitation because former German Southwest Africa now is ruled by the Union under a League of Nations mandate.

Delivered by Goering

The unofficial outline of Germany's demands was reported to have been delivered recently by Field Marshal Goering to the Marquess of Londonderry, British Conservative leader. Prominent Nazis also were said to have stated them to Sir Neville Henderson, Britain's ambassador to Berlin, before he came home for a vacation last week.

Germany, however, still has failed to put forward specific demands on which negotiations between London and Berlin could be started, informed sources said.

Thus the cabinet would be forced to consider the matter without knowledge of what Hitler wants since he could always elaborate or modify unofficial demands until he is definitely committed to certain claims.

Reliable quarters said Pirow's trip was significant in this respect since he would endeavor in Berlin to ascertain just how far colonial powers would have to go to satisfy Hitler.

Portuguese Cession Asked

Portugal, where Pirow is spending five days, is involved since the Portuguese colony of Angola adjoins southwest Africa and has a large German population. In addition, Mozambique, Portugal's colony in southeast Africa, gained a slice of formerly German Tanganyika in the post-war division of the colonial spoils. Most of Tanganyika went to Britain.

Entirely unofficial quarters suggested an Anglo-German colonial deal might give Germany Angola as well as a part of adjacent Belgian Congo instead of any British or French mandated territories.

Since colonial matters still are so uncertain, the cabinet probably will turn gladly to other considerations, including Chamberlain's desire to bring the Anglo-Italian Easter pact into effect, a step made contingent on some "settlement" in Spain.

America's Foreign Trade In September Over August Level

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that American foreign trade expanded in September over August.

September exports totaled $246,361,000, compared with $230,625,000 in August.

Imports were $167,651,000, compared with August imports of $165,541,000.

In September, 1937, exports totaled $296,579,000, and imports $233,142,000.

The department said exports last month were the largest since May, and imports the largest since March.

$78,710,000 More Exports

The $78,710,000 excess of September exports over imports brought the total export balance for the first nine months of this year to $860,234,000, with exports of $2,295,196,000 and imports of $1,434,962,000.

In the same months of last year, imports aggregating $2,427,446,000, exceeded exports by $49,089,000.

Exports of agricultural products rose from $61,41,000 to $75,197,000 in September, but the department said the increase was less than seasonal. The unfavorable situation was ascribed to a decline of grain shipments. Exports of cotton, meats, lard, fruit and tobacco increased, however.

Increases Listed

Compared with August, exports of cotton cloth, lumber, paper manufactures, iron and steel manufactures were larger in September. Other increases in exports were shown in motor trucks, fuel oil, crude sulphur, copper and coal tar products. Shipments of gasoline, passenger automobiles and crude petroleum declined.

On the import list, increases were reported for newsprint, linens, art works, liquors, crude rubber, manganese and nickel ores, raw wool and raw silk. Imports of cocoa decreased.

Meanwhile, Government officials, studying reports that Germany wants a triangular trade agreement with Great Britain and the United States on the basis of barter and "blocked marks," have found that a large share of German-American commerce is already conducted by such a system.

Hull Opposes System

Although Secretary Hull has declared Germany's method of trade was diametrically opposed to that of the United States, some officials believe a majority of the trade between the two countries may be along Germany's lines. The exact percentage was not known here.

In 1937 Germany bought $124,166,000 worth of merchandise from the United States and sold it $92,644,000 worth—a total trade of more than $200,000,000.

One official estimated that nearly all the American cotton sold to Germany—655,894 bales in the year ended last July—had been sold either on a barter or "blocked marks" arrangement.

(Blocked marks are German funds owned by Americans and other foreigners in bank deposits in Germany. They can be used only for certain limited purposes permitted by the government and cannot be removed from the country.)

A dozen firms in New York, informed persons said, engage in barter trade with Germany. They act as brokers for the sale of American products. In exchange for these products they take German merchandise which they sell in the United States. They then pay the American exporter with the dollars they get from the sale here of the German products.

Bribe Spurned, Spies Menaced Naval Ensign

Officer Reveals Threats
Rumrich Upholds Him
One of Many Failures

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 25.—A young United States Navy ensign, stationed aboard the aircraft carrier Enterprise, today identified in Federal court a letter from a German spy threatening him with "dire consequences" if he divulged overtures made to him for American military secrets.

The witness, Ensign William B. Brown, said he was stationed aboard the United States aircraft carrier Saratoga last January when he received the letter. He ignored it at the time.

Money Was Lure

Appearing as a "two minute witness," Ensign Brown interrupted the cross-examination of Guenther Rumrich, 32, confessed Nazi spy, who previously testified that he sent a threatening letter to Ensign Brown urging him to "wise up" and telling him there were "certain ways" an enterprising naval officer could make money.

Rumrich acknowledged that this attempt to lead an American officer into betraying his uniform and flag was only one among many "penny dreadful" plots which failed to materialize.

As Rumrich resumed the stand, George C. Dix, attorney for Johanna Hofmann, 26, one of the three defendants, subjected the witness to a searching cross-examination on what promises, if any, he had received in return for testifying for the Government.

"I received no promises," said Rumrich, who pleaded guilty at the start of the trial.

Dix referred to previous testimony that Leon G. Turrou, former FBI agent, who helped "break" the spy case, told Rumrich "if you play ball with me, I'll play ball with you."

"What did you understand about Turrou saying that?"

"I don't know," Rumrich answered.

Dix pressed the witness about the conditions surrounding the alleged "confession" of Fraulein Hofmann to FBI agents.

She Doubted Breakdown

"Mr. Turrou told her that I had made a complete confession and that it was no use for her to hide anything," Rumrich said. "She said, 'Nicht wahr'—it's not true."

"Did you explain your activities so she would know what you had confessed?" Dix asked.

"She didn't have to," Rumrich said. "She knew. She was right in with Schlueter all the time."

He referred to Karl Schlueter, scar-faced alleged "contact" man of the spy ring, who is a fugitive from justice.

Rumrich said that when he was arrested, last February, he carried a Social Security card and the torn half of a picture postcard of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, Paris. The other half of the card, he said, would identify any fellow-conspirator in the espionage ring.

In spite of the uproar over the Robinson-Ruben passport affair, Rumrich was confident he could procure passport blanks for Nazi spies, he testified.

Rumrich made the statement under cross-examination by Benjamin Matthews, counsel for Erich Glaser, one of the three defendants.

An attempt last February to get the passport blanks by telephoning the State Department office here, requesting they be sent to a hotel, led to Rumrich's arrest and the seizure later of Glaser, Fraulein Hofmann and Otto Hermann Voss, third defendant.

The Robinson-Rubin passport matter involved two Americans, traveling in Russia on passports containing false information.

Rumrich repeated, under cross-examination, his testimony that Schlueter had told him he made a "lucky strike" by rifling the liner Europa's mail bags and making photographic copies of a contract between the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the Amtorg Trading Corporation, a Soviet corporation.

Magyar Fliers Shoot Down Czech Plane

Over Slovak Territory
Pilot, Hurt, Bails Out
Demands Rejected

By the United Press.

Prague, Oct. 25.—The Czechoslovak war ministry today announced that two Hungarian pursuit planes this afternoon shot down a Czech military observation plane flying over the Slovak village of Boda, 8 miles from the Slovak-Hungarian border.

The war ministry said the pilot of the Czech plane, wounded by machine gun bullets, had managed to parachute to earth. The plane cashed in flames in Slovak territory.

Boda is midway between Bratislava and Komarno, two of the cities for possession of which the two countries have been arguing for weeks. It is in the heart of the area which Hungary is demanding from Slovakia.

[Czechoslovakia was reported tonight to have turned down the latest Hungarian demands for territory, but without closing the door on further negotiations, the Associated Press said.

[A laconic communique issued after a session of the three governments—the national, autonomous Slovak and autonomous Ruthenian—said a "basis for further negotiations has been established."

[In informed diplomatic circles, however, it was understood Czechoslovakia had decided on at least three definite points:

[Rejection of the Hungarian suggestion for plebiscites in regions of mixed populations.

[Rejection of Hungary's proposal to arbitrate the territorial controversy with Germany, Italy and Poland as mediators.

[A firm decision to hold to the terms of the Munich accord, with any cession of territory dependent upon the approval of the four powers—Britain, France, Germany and Italy—which participated in that conference.—Editor's note.]

Slovak political quarters reported that the Prague meeting resulted in a decision to ask Hitler and Mussolini to arbitrate the frontier question.

Hungary yesterday asked immediate cession of border territory which both sides already have agreed is populated predominantly with Magyars and occupation of disputed territory by Hungarian troops until plebiscites are held, not later than November 30.

Almost 500,000 Hungarian troops stood under arms and Hungarian terrorists continued activities in the disputed areas. Army reports from Ruthenia said that Czechoslovakia patrols yesterday suffered one killed and five wounded when they were surprised by a band of 50 terrorists near Kosinsky. The dispatch said two wounded Czechs were carried across the border as prisoners.

U. S. Buys Ship Of Munson Line For $135,000

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—The steamship American Legion, of the Munson Line, was sold for $135,000 to the U. S. Maritime Commission today.

Built in 1921 at a cost of $8,000,000, the 13,736-ton ship formerly was in the South American service and was auctioned by the Federal court to satisfy claims for repairs Its future was not indicated.

Morris Shapiro, of Baltimore, Md., bid $126,000 with the idea of junking the craft.

Standing silently by was gray-bearded Carlos Munson, former vice president of the Munson Line. He said afterward it was impossible for any American owner to operate a ship out of this country without "a substantial subsidy."

ALL YOUR CURIOSITY satisfied by Your Mileage Merchant...Ask him exactly how you're sure of fast winter starting and extreme oil economy by changing now to WINTER OIL-PLATING

Is OIL-PLATING just a different name? ...No. OIL-PLATING is what Conoco Germ Processed oil does! The out-and-out difference is this: OIL-PLATING will stay firmly attached—plated—clear to the topmost point in your engine, while any plain mineral oil drains clear down the crankcase at every stop.

Exactly where is your gain? Well, in starting up again—next day or next month—the coldest OIL-PLATED engine is always oiled in advance...pre-lubricated before any oil down in the crankcase could ever stir. OIL-PLATING thus keeps every engine part constantly slippy. The starter speeds...the battery lives and so does the engine, free of fierce starting friction.

But is there any oil saving? Why?... Because less engine wear puts more miles between quarts. And OIL-PLATING itself never passes out during the use of Germ Processed oil. Only the Germ Process, patented, creates OIL-PLATING, the sensible reason for you to switch to Your Mileage Merchant today.

'Suez' Is Mighty Drama Magnificently Filmed

One of the Big Ones of the Year
Henry Daniell Cast Opposite Ina Claire
News Items and Gossip of the Theater

IN comparatively recent conversations with Col. Jason S. Joy, director of public relations for Twentieth Century-Fox Pictures, and Earl Wingart, in charge of that company's Eastern publicity department, this column was told that "Suez" not only would provide a windfall of entertainment, executed on a scale of impressive magnitude, but also would visualize an authentic historical background of vital international events in the period beginning with the year 1850. These reliable gentlemen, quite obviously, were not deluded into any excesses of exaggeration by their enthusiasm over one of the best pictures their company has made.

BELL.

Yesterday afternoon's preview screening of "Suez" revealed a magnificent example of painstaking production, a splendid cast and a sufficiently sensational element of spectacle to insure seemingly certain success at the box-office.

Like most historical romances that find their way to the screen, "Suez" lays no claim to being an infallibly accurate lesson in world politics and recent history. Minor liberties have been taken with both characters and events—just as Mr. Joy and Mr. Wingart told me they would be—but in the large view the picture does such a fine job of depicting the difficulties thrown in the way of Ferdinand de Lesseps in the fulfillment of his dream of a waterway between the Mediterranean and Red seas that its occasional deviation from fact well may be condoned. A colorful vein of romantic love interest parallels the story's chief concern with de Lesseps' struggle to bring about the consummation of his life's work. And right in the midst of all this, is presented a scene so terrific as to take its place beside the windstorm in "The Hurricane," the earthquake in "San Francisco" or the conflagration in "In Old Chicago," as a triumph of the cinema's technical wizardry.

The desert simoon that undoes so much of de Lesseps' arduous work and leaves him bankrupt with success almost in sight, is a prodigious debacle. And it is not dragged in for the mere sake of spectacular sensationalism. It plays a very definite and essential part in the rounding out of a narrative of directness and strength, despite its great variety of content.

"Cavalcade" has been cited more than any other as the picture which "Suez" most closely approaches. If one wished a stage analogy, it seems to me it should be Louis Napoleon Parker's thoughtful drama of "Disraeli," in which George Arliss starred so successfully back in 1911 and 1912 and then transferred to the screen for a repetition of its original success. Both hinge on the successful completion of the Suez Canal, although the present film, of course, indulges a diversity and magnitude of scene that the traditional theater could not even remotely approximate.

A more detailed consideration of the film, the work of the stellar cast, led by Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and Arabella, and other pertinent aspects of the picture will appear in this space Friday morning, following its opening tomorrow on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater.

In the meantime, be prepared for one of the "big ones" of "the motion picture's greatest year."

This might be the best time, however, to make some mention of the fact that "Suez" restores Allan Dwan to his rightful place among the foremost directors of motion pictures the industry can boast. Allan Dwan, born in Toronto 53 years ago, is one of the real veterans of his craft. His career had its beginning back in the old days of the Essanay and American Film companies, both unremembered by the current generation of picture fans. He later directed such stars of their day as Clara Kimball Young, Louise Glaum, Douglas Fairbanks, sr., Gloria Swanson and many others. In more recent times, his name has been associated less with heroic drama than with the pleasantly inconsequential films known as "program pictures," although Shirley Temple's "Heidi" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" might be deemed a step above that classification. "Suez" puts him "up there" with the best of them, where he belongs.

Known as radio's most novel act, "The Kidoodlers," whose likenesses appear on this page today, were selected by a national radio fan magazine as second only to the distinguished maestro, Toscanini, in a list of "the ten most unusual radio presentations of the past year." Those who have caught them on the stage at Loew's Capitol this week will not be surprised by this rating.

The guitars are the only full-sized, legitimate instruments in the act. The other 117, accumulated at a total cost of $103.14, came from five-and-dime emporiums, junk shops, second-hand stores and rummage sales—barring a few they designed themselves and had made to order. Least expensive are the baby rattles, used as maraccas; most expensive is a toy marimba, made for them at a cost of $29.50. Most novel is the "trombadoodle," made of a trombone mute and a length of copper tubing, bent to resemble a slide-trombone.

Bill Remington, Paul Cordner, Bill Kerns and Eddie Lewis began as a strictly vocal group, gradually picking up toy instruments and odd gadgets as a comedy background for their tricky song arrangements. Now look at 'em!

Together with further corroboration of the assurance that Ina Claire positively will appear in "Yankee Fable," at the National Theater next week, comes the announcement that Miss Claire will have Henry Daniell, last seen on the stage in "Kind Lady," as her leading man in the role of Gen. Bowe. Mr. Daniell has come East from Hollywood especially to play this part—which will place John Williams in the comedy role of Maj. Creel, who tries to prevent the general's flirtation with Lorinda Bleeker, portrayed by Miss Claire. Henry Daniell perhaps will be best remembered for his recent work with Greta Garbo in "Camille" and Katharine Hepburn in "Holiday," on the screen.

The goblins will get you again next Monday night at Loew's Capitol. The only Loew house in the city to adhere to the Halloween tradition, the Capitol announces an extended schedule of performances for next Monday night, the real chills-and-fever show to go on at 11:45 p. m. Tickets for this witching-hour celebration now are on sale at all Loew box-offices at the regular scale of prices. The screen feature will be "Stablemates," with Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney. That steel-spring dancer, Paul Haakon will headline the vaudeville bill.

While we didn't know it at the time, that unanimous selection of Pablo Santana and Martha Benitez as winners of the "Great Waltz" waltzing contest, at the Capitol Monday night, must have been prompted in part by subconscious suggestion springing from our residence in Puerto Rico for several years in an earlier incarnation. Both Mr. Santana and Miss Benitez, it seems, are Puerto Ricans. But the judges' chief backstage "bang,' sprang from Chester Hale's deep red and black-checked sport coat. It wouldn't surprise me to hear any minute now that some chilly horse with an eye for fashion had crowded him out of it!

A dramatic program, flavored with ghostly situations, old-fashioned Halloween games and dancing, will highlight a party to be given by the Pierce Hall Players Monday evening in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets. Mabel Hunt, in charge of the program, will direct a weird one-act play, "Manhattan Maniac." The players will be Betty Utgard, Willard Jones and Ted Gardner. Also taking part in the entertainment will be members of the cast of "Room Service," scheduled for presentation by the Pierce Hall Players on November 9 and 10, under the direction of Howard F. Wentworth.

Monday night's gathering is one of a series to be given by the Pierce Hall group this winter, on each fourth Monday, featuring one-act plays, stagecraft, lectures on various phases of the theater and self-instruction in dramatics.

On Sunday, the all-musical, Jewish, talking picture, "The Singing Blacksmith," will be shown at the Rialto Theater. It is based on a Jewish folk-drama by David Pinsky, with music composed by Prof. Jacob Weinberg. The cast is made up of leading artists of the Maurice Schwartz Art Theater and the Artef Players. Superimposed English subtitles will interpret the dialogue.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 25.—I never expected to live long enough to see a zipper on a lion! Imagine my surprise when I saw Bert Lahr zipped inside one. He's doing the shaggy part in "Wizard of Oz." Carries a real lion skin on his back and it weighs 75 pounds. Under that he has the usual long woolies. Bert put on 8 pounds preparing for this part, but heat melted it away during the first week. "Guess this is my punishment for having such a good time with Claudette Colbert in 'Zaza,'" said Bert.

HEDDA HOPPER

He has a long shot and a close-up of his whiskers. The close-up ones wiggle. His suffering from the lion's face—which fits on over his upper lip and nose and ties to his ears—he likened it to the agony of the Christian martyrs in their hair shirts. He takes his soup through a straw. He tried a bit of steak for luncheon and was forced to spend much time working to remove a hunk that had anchored between his teeth—he hadn't made it when I left the set.

Ray Bolger as the scarecrow has an easier time. They gave him an India-rubber face to match his body. The face is glued on over his own, leaving nose, mouth and eyes out. Spent last week-end in seclusion, rubbing lemon verbena soothing cream into his pores. He hadn't quite got the knack of pulling off his new face, so considerable of his own came with it.

Ray says the story is the nearest thing to the book he's seen thus far in pictures. He's crazy about the whole thing, his only regret being that he was too busy on "Oz" to teach Clark Gable the dances for "Idiot's Delight."

But Buddy Ebsen as the Tin Man really had the miseries. His hair was completely covered with a silver cap. Over his face is a layer of soft wax, sprinkled with half a pound of silver dust, and he has a stationary chin strap from ear to ear. He relaxes against a huge ironing board with rests for his arms—supposed to ease the burden of cumbersome pants, which flare up in front like hoops of steel and prevent him from sitting. They've all got a mad on at Judy Garland. She only suffers a blonde wig.

"Oz" is in Technicolor, which makes the mechanical end three times as hard, but Director Dick Thorpe takes everything in his stride. A nervous man would be in a psychopathic ward now. This is the first time, to my knowledge, they've tried putting this type of fantasy on the screen with human beings.

And next year the ladies will be wearing Ozzie's topcoats, designed by Adrian. These have three tiers of gray felt splashed with scarlet embroidered in steel rivets.

It was an overzealous cameraman, with a love for spotlights, who took the job of the Witch away from Gale Sondergaard and gave it to Margaret Hamilton. He made Gale so beautiful that Mervyn LeRoy was certain she couldn't be wicked.

Went on to "New York Cinderella" set. Joe Von Sternberg said to me: "If I haven't paid any attention to you it's because of the devastating effect I have on ladies. Didn't want you to suffer." He says Hedy LaMarr is loaded with dynamite in her dramatic scenes—as though we didn't know it.

Marlene Dietrich telephoned von Sternberg from Paris telling him of her beautiful sun tan. He never had a picture of her around till people started picking on her. Now Joe has one on his desk. "Her only sin," he said, "was that she didn't make a bad picture great. But she'll be back—bigger than ever." I'm inclined to agree with him.

I asked Walter Pidgeon how it felt to be a success. "Didn't know I was," Pidge answered, "until two other companies tried to borrow me. Will only believe it if I can keep Reggie Gardner off the set while I'm doing love scenes with Hedy."

The day the bulldog took a sample of Clark Gable, Pidge wired him as follows: "Dear Clarkie, I'm a large stockholder in a concern which manufactures dog food. Would like to have picture of that certain part of your anatomy to use on my can. Fantail Pidgeon." Can't print Clark's reply.

Two of the happiest people in town are Virginia Van Upp, who wrote "Cafe Society," and E. H. Griffith, who's directing it. Virginia has worked for Ned before, but as secretary to one of his writers at $35 per. Now she's been upped to $1,500 per on same lot, working with the same friends.

Leo McCarey just had a letter from a friend in London telling him that the Harvard Club over there had run his picture, "Make Way for Tomorrow," three times in the last six months.

The Wizards Of Hollywood Have Headache

Are Filming "Oz"
Cast Takes Bumps
In Technicolor

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Correspondent.

Hollywood, Oct. 25.—Metro has in production today "The Wizard of Oz" and the wizards of Hollywood—suffering headaches or head colds or both—seem to be deeper into the wizarding business than the wizard himself.

The story, as you doubtless remember, concerns the Kansas cyclone which unroofs Dorothy's house and dumps her in the land of Oz, where the apple trees act, the winkies are tough and such folks as the cowardly lion, the tin woodsman and the scarecrow have their troubles.

The studio thus is venturing into pure fantasy, and in Technicolor at that, and that's why all the local wizards are in the doldrums. Director Richard Thorpe, whose last picture had good old Robert Taylor as a prizefighter with a kindly heart, found himself directing a scene wherein:

Apples and Winkies

Dorothy (Judy Garland) reached up to pluck an apple from a tree. The tree reached down, took the apple away from her, and slapped her on the wrist! That made the tin woodsman (Buddy Ebsen) angry, so he tried to take all the tree's apples away from it—and found himself in a fight with a 100-fisted tree.

Then Thorpe took his troupe to Stage 27, wherein was the interior of a castle of the wicked witch (Margaret Hamilton). This craggy building was guarded by the winkies, all of whom had long noses, green complexions, fur hats and gigantic gray overcoats with red stripes. There were 28 of these winkies. They all looked exactly alike, and they were the only members of the company who felt comfortable.

It seemed that Adrina, the lad who designs the fancy clothes that Shearer, Crawford and Garbo wear, had outdone himself dressing up the winkies. Their costumes were made of the finest grade of heavy felt, buttoned tight from neck to toe, and the winkies all nearly died from heat prostration at first.

The Cast's Assorted Ills

Director Thorpe, already suffering his headache, ordered the air-conditioning turned on strong for the winkies, and that gave him the cold. He nevertheless continued his wizarding, with aid of an 80-foot hydraulic camera boom, which enabled him to photograph the winkies chasing the cowardly lion (Bert Lahr), the scarecrow (Ray Bolger) and the tin woodsman down the steps.

These latter three characters suffered assorted ills. Lion Lahr, for instance, couldn't chew his dinner because of his lionesque upper lip, of yellow rubber. Woodsman Ebsen, whose whole face was painted silver color, had a tin strap around his chin. This gave him a stiff neck, while Scarecrow Bolger suffered general disability. His complexion was the color and texture of gray burlap and it made him ill to look in the mirror.

"And you'll notice that Mervyn Leroy, the producer, is nowhere to be seen," muttered Lion Lahr, "the reason is easy to find. He's scared to come down here. He doesn't dare. He knows there's a cowardly lion here that would bite his leg off."

Lahr's threats sounded none too real. In a sneaking, underhand way he seemed to be enjoying himself, playing in such a picture as no grown man ever has played before.

The film is based on the first of the Oz books, a long series of which were written by L. Frank Baum, and which other authors continued after his death.

The problem of Thorpe and Leroy is multifold. They've got to make a picture which will amuse adults, thrill children, follow the book and shatter no Oz illusions. That explains the scene wherein a tree takes matters into its own hands—and if you think making an apple tree do that doesn't take wizardry of the special Hollywood kind, you've got another think coming.

The wizards have plenty of time and money. They're taking it slowly, doing the job up exactly as Baum imagined it, and probably won't have the picture ready for exhibition before February or March. If by then they still are able to go home and refrain from burning all their children's Oz books, they will have proved themselves the kind of men who can stand anything.

Best-Ruled Town Chosen As Film Guide

Kalamazoo, Mich., is the best governed town in the United States. Winnetka, Ill., follows close behind, and East Cleveland and Austin, Tex., share third place.

These are the findings of political scientists at leading universities throughout the United States, it was revealed today by George Arthur, Hollywood film producer, who solicited their opinions for the preparations of a motion picture.

"I was anxious to get a line on three or four well-governed American towns to serve as a pattern for the Bob Burns-Fay Bainter film, "The Arkansas Traveler," in which Burns dramatizes the struggle between a country newspaper and corrupt small-town politicians.

"It suited my purpose best to use a well-governed town as our model, because we are seeking to have the one portrayed on the screen as the typical small American town, and it would have been an injustice to portray the smaller communities in anything but the most favorable light."

Other well-governed small towns were Boulder, Colo.; Wichita Falls, Kans.; Ashtabula, Ohio; Escanaba, Mich.; Columbus, Ga.; Wichita Falls, Tex., Newport News, Va.; Kenosha, Wis.; Lynchburg, Va.; Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Lubbock, Tex.; and Shawnee, Okla.

Universities contributing to Producer Arthur's survey include Michigan, Illinois, Northwestern, Chicago, Southern California, California, Pennsylvania, New York and Minnesota.

Reflected Glory

As a child actress, Anne Shirley, currently featured in "A Man to Remember," enacted the roles of many noted stars in their childhood—Janet Gaynor, Madge Bellamy, Myrna Loy, Barbara Stanwyck, Fay Wray and others.

". . . and your sisters were here last night . . . What, dear? . . . Did I show them the movies of our European trip? . . . I wanted to, but they didn't want to look at any movies—without Screno."

12 P. M. "M-G-M sent the finished scenario of 'Idiot's Delight' to Bob Sherwood, who wrote the play," a film official relates at the Versailles. "Bob was to look at it, to determine who should get the screen credits. The play had been set in Italy, but Sherwood found no mention of Italy in the scenario, until he came to a line where one actor says: 'Well, I guess I'll go back to Italy.' So Sherwood sent the scenario back to M-G-M, with the suggestion: 'Give a screen credit to Benito Mussolini'" . . . "Jerome Kern is in town," a songwriter informs at the Paradise, "to fix a deal for a new musical. Ira Gershwin will write the lyrics" . . . "A brother of Tommy Corcoran—of Roosevelt's Corcoran-Cohen team," an attorney confides at the Tavern, "now works at the United States Attorney's office here."

1 A. M. "How about working for us?" Frank Hurt, Coq Rouge proprietor, suggests to Mae Murray . . . "No, thanks," Miss Murray replies. "I'm opening my own cafe" . . . "The Four Aces, the bridge-champs," a ringsider declares at the Casa Manana, "are bringing out a new game—Mah Jong, played with cards, instead of ivories" . . . A young girl walks across the floor at the Tokay and sings her own composition, "Stay." "My father wrote a real good tune," she identifies. "He's W. C. Handy. He wrote 'St Louis Blues'" . . . Jimmy Donahue, whose mother has barred him from the Broadway cafes, gazes soulfully up Broadway from Forty-sixth street, and enters—Child's Restaurant.

2 A. M. "The Astoria Fire Department co-operated with us when we put on our fire scene for '. . . one-third of a Nation . . .'" Director Dudley Murphy relates at the Stork Club. "When we threw a flaming dummy from the roof, the firemen forgot themselves and started to jump on it to put the fire out. I warned them, reshot the scene and then they handled the dummy tenderly" . . . "My studio has been giving me B pictures," Herbert Marshall laments to Cab Calloway at the Cotton Club. "That makes my career from fair to maudlin" . . . "Well, I guess we'll have no privacy," Sally Clark confesses at the Plaza. "I just found out—after George and I are married and go to Honolulu three bridesmaids and one usher will go along."

3 A. M. "Metro finally has decided to screen the life of George Gershwin," an agent reports at the Havana-Madrid. "George's brother, Ira, will be co-producer" . . . "Sidney Franklin, the bullfighter who was Hemingway's pal in loyalist Spain, is back in Brooklyn nursing wounds," a publisher advises at the Yumuri. "Franklin, a loyalist sympathizer, went to Franco territory to look at some bulls and got hit by a loyalist bomb" . . . "Merritt Hulburd quit Goldwyn to return to his editorial job at the Saturday Evening Post, at one-fourth his movie salary," a producer relates at the Central Park Casino. "He was ill in Hollywood, and thought the change would improve his health. But he got sick in Philadelphia, too, so he signed with Selznick. 'If I'm going to be sick,' he said, 'I'd like to be sick at a good salary.'"

4 A. M. "I just sent a cocoanut pie to George Jessel, who's working in Kentucky," the Cafe Boheme owner tells Selznick. "George wired me to complain because I didn't send a cup of coffee, too" . . . "Iso Elinson, the Russian pianist, just arrived to make his American debut Wednesday at Carnegie Hall," a musician states at La Conga. "He had a fight with the customs officials when he tried to bring in a bon voyage basket of apples" . . . "Bob Garland, the former drama critic," a publicist reports at La Conga, "has written a new play. It's called 'Mr. Currier & Mr. Ives'" . . . "John Jacob Astor paid a photographer $16 last week to give him the plate of a picture he had taken of Astor in a night club," a cameraman informs at the Kit Kat. "Astor got the plate and destroyed it. It was a dummy."

5 A. M. Erickson Carlson headwaiter at the Midnight Sun, returns to that cafe after leaving for the night to correct the next day's menu. Carlson ascends the steps, discovers a fire—and is the only one overcome by the smoke . . . "I'm disappointed about Col. Gimp," Oscar Levant sighs at Lindy's. "He's destroyed the prestige of the Cloveden Set at Lindy's." . . . "I saw 'Case History,' the play written and produced by doctors," Sidney Kingsley is told at Dave's. "It's not as good as your 'Men in White'" . . . "Of course, it isn't!" Kingsley replies. "After all, if I tried to do an appendectomy, I couldn't do it as well as a doctor."

6 A. M. "Yes, dear, I've seen the baby's hair . . . Of course, it's long, but I won't have it cut yet . . . Well, it would make me feel as if he were putting on his first pair of long pants."

Jitterbug Problem Baffles Director

Because Mary "Punkins" Parker is a jitterbug, the shooting schedule of "St. Louis Blues" had to be changed considerably, Director Raoul Walsh has disclosed.

The shapely blonde dancer, discovered for the movies by Billy Rose, originally was set to make a direct song recording from the set of the Dorothy Lamour-Lloyd Nolan picture, and to play the love scene with Tito Guizar to the musical background of a swing number by Matty Malneck and his St. Louis Blues.

"But," explained Walsh, "it seems that when a hot band gets in the groove, Punkins goes berserk. So when it came to the song number, we couldn't keep her under the microphone long enough to get a proper recording. As as for that love scene with Guizar—why, she couldn't stop patting her foot! She's the worst jitterbug I've ever seen!"

1,000 in Peril As Deutschland Subdues Fire

Ship

Deutschland's emergency calls had been "cleared from the air."

N. B. C. said this indicated there was no longer an emergency on the vessel.

Broadcasting and reception on the transatlantic air channels—cut off in the emergency period to assure uninterrupted communication between the Deutschland and rescue ships—was resumed.

Mackay Radio reported at 9:50 p. m.:

"At 0220 G. M. T. (9:20 p. m., E. S. T.) Deutschland sent 'CQ SOS clear for traffic.'

"The Deutschland is keeping in communication steadily with steamships Collamer, American Traveler and Europe. These three are rushing to her assistance. They did not say anything about fire being under control yet."

Filled to Capacity

Local officials of the Hamburg-American line said about 100 of the passengers were in cabin class.

According to local records of the ship, it was filled to its passenger-carrying capacity. These showed it was designed to carry 76 in cabin Class, 169 in tourist and 345 in third.

Other officers besides Capt. Steincke include First Officer A. Raschke, First Engineer A. Kolster, Purser R. Seitz, and Chief Steward F. Lau.

Tonight's accident was the most serious in the history of the Deutschland, the pride of the German marine when she was launched in 1923.

Halifax authorities reported that in one case the Deutschland declined the assistance of a rescue ship.

The American steamship Winston-Salem, in nearby waters, wirelessed the burning ship she could be at her side at daybreak. The Deutschland answered cryptically: "Sorry. Too late."

Meanwhile the Canadian government salvage tug Foundation Franklin, believed to be the only rescue vessel with complete fire-fighting equipment, steamed northeastward from Port Hawkesbury, Nova Scotia, in an effort to intercept the German liner before noon tomorrow.

Only two years after its launching in 1923, the Deutschland became involved in the first of a series of accidents. The liner collided with the steamer Martin Carl in the English Channel in a fog in 1925.

Later in the same year the vessel figured in a crash with two other ships while it was proceeding up the Elbe River, Germany.

In 1929, while she was nearing her New York pier, fire broke out on the Deutschland, but the crew managed to extinguish the flames before the passengers became aware of the blaze.

Four years later the ship had its most spectacular accident when it collided with the Munson liner Munargo on November 18, 1933, off the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor.

The bow of the German ship was torn away and the Munargo was ripped open from the waterline to the deck amidships on the port side. The Deutschland limped to port while the Munargo was grounded just off the statue.

In 1936 the Deutschland conquered one of the Atlantic's worst storms in years to land a cargo of passengers and mail safely in New York on Christmas Eve.

Lifeboats Enough for All

The Deutschland's messages indicated that the fire had broken out in a stateroom, but were not clear as to the location of the room.

The first call for assistance reported "fire in Room No. 2."

The ship continued to crackle signals at regular intervals. The German liner Bremen, 500 miles east of the Deutschland, kept in constant touch with the burning ship and directed closer vessels to her aid.

Officials of the line in New York said later the early messages regarding origin of the fire apparently were erroneous. They said that it had started in No. 2 and No. 4 holds.

Capt. William Drechsel, marine superintendent of the line, was in constant communication with the ship. He said she had enough lifeboats and rafts, to accommodate all on board.

Henry Wehrenberg, 1320 Belmont street northwest, a former lunchroom proprietor, called The Post last night to learn whether his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wehrenberg of Liebenau, Hanover, Germany, aboard the Deutschland, are safe.

The Wehrenbergs were coming to Washington to visit him and then to live with two children living at Baltimore, Wehrenberg said.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medicinal combination designed to aid nature in soothing and healing infected mucous membranes by allaying irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling germ-laden phlegm.

The Medical Profession has for generations recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a good dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and may be taken frequently by both adults and children.

Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very best of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles due to common colds hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund your money. Creomulsion is the word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Ironic Commentary

A survey of unsafe and insanitary dwellings in Washington is considered necessary to further expansion of low-cost housing projects, since the act establishing the United States Housing Authority calls for the demolition of such structures when new buildings are erected.

The location of all dwellings dangerous to life and health should, of course, be a matter of official record in any efficiently run municipality, even in the absence of legislation authorizing slum clearance. But unfortunately that is not the case in the Nation's Capital, as attested by the recent collapse of two buildings that would doubtless have been condemned had the District's inspection force been adequate.

Several years ago that force was actually reduced drastically, and the director of the Department of Inspection has called for a 20 per cent increase in 1940 budget appropriations. The money is needed chiefly to pay the salaries of additional inspectors. In view of the limited personnel available for carrying on the most pressing of the routine inspection duties of the force, it is not surprising that Colonel Oehmann, the building inspector, considers his present force incapable of taking on the extra work desired by the Alley Dwelling Authority.

It is a sad commentary upon our haphazard methods of instituting reforms that we should pass legislation to facilitate slum clearance without even knowing the location of all obsolete and dangerous structures in our cities. It is nothing short of a major scandal that in the Capital of the Nation people are permitted to inhabit or work in insecure buildings because Congress is too niggardly to permit the District to pay the cost of adequate inspection.

First Line Of Defense

There are many indications that military expenditures, already enormous, will be sharply stepped up in the appropriations for the coming fiscal year. And the portents are arousing little or no important protest. On the contrary, it is taken for granted by the overwhelming majority of Americans that in the present state of world insecurity the Nation's defenses must be built up, cost what it may.

Our real first line of defense, however, is neither the Navy, the Army nor the air establishment. They constitute the last desperate means the Nation must employ to keep itself immune from invasion. They are called into action only when diplomacy has failed. The actual first line of defense is found in the skillful and efficient conduct of our foreign relations, a task entrusted to the President and the Department of State.

As a great power, with far-flung interests, the complexity of our foreign relations has steadily increased over the years. The problems involved, both in numbers and difficulty, will become even more formidable now that the world has been flung back into a state of international anarchy. Thus the burden on the Department of State, already heavy, is certain to grow greatly during the coming critical months.

Continuation of the niggardly attitude of Congress toward the inescapable requirements of American diplomacy would do much to render meaningless the generosity the House and Senate show towards the fighting services. And the need of getting a better perspective on the issue is clear to all who examine the relative scale of our war-preparation and peace-preservation expenditures.

Since 1935, which marked the collapse of the London naval parley and the beginning of dynamic developments in Europe that had their climax at the recent Munich parley, American expenditures for armaments have been rising by leaps and bounds. Now in the neighborhood of a billion dollars, the defense budget has already doubled in four years and is almost certain to mount higher.

In the same period, total appropriations for the Department of State and the Foreign Service, including the building fund and international obligations, claims and trust funds, rose from only $15,695,593 for the fiscal year 1935 to $17,019,200 for the current fiscal year. If deductions are made for the department's receipts from fees of various kinds it will be found that the net cost of our actual first line of defense is little more than 1 per cent of that for the fighting services.

One is just as much needed as the other. And in preparing to spend hundreds of millions for battleships, tanks and airplanes more thought must be given to the pressing needs of the Department of State. It is overworked, it is understaffed, and it is carrying a load of responsibility entirely out of proportion to the attention given its essential needs.

The Fall Of Hankow

With the capture of Hankow the Japanese have accomplished the next to the last of their great military objectives in China. What remains, before a punitive peace can be imposed on the Chinese people and China made a satrapy of the island empire, is destruction of the still considerable army which Chiang Kai-shek managed to remove from the Hankow sector before the temporary capital was taken.

From some new base, deep in the interior of China, Chiang can continue the war and as long as he remains in the field, even though forced to depend entirely on guerrilla tactics, Japan's hope of final victory will remain unfulfilled. There can be no effective pacification of the vast territory Japan has conquered in the past 15 months as long as Japan's extended lines of control are constantly harassed and in danger of obliteration.

Yet there is no minimizing the gains made by the Japanese armies during the past week, nor the blow which the consecutive capture of Canton and Hankow represents to China. The Chinese government is now completely cut off from the richest and most prosperous parts of the nation and deprived of its chief sources of revenue. Every port and almost every mile of railroad is already, or soon will be, in the enemy's hands.

Stupendous as the material difficulties facing Chiang have now become, the greatest danger facing him is that the loss of Canton and Hankow may lead to a collapse of Chinese morale. If that remains high, as was the case following the loss of Tientsin and Peiping, of Shanghai and Nanking and Hsuchow, the war will go on and Japan will continue to face the danger of being bled white before victory has been made secure. If, however, the Chinese ranks are now demoralized, with defeatism and treachery replacing the magnificent spirit which these ill-equipped troops have hitherto displayed, Japan's dream of dominating all of China will be close to realization.

It is not a happy prospect for China. Nor is it a happy prospect for many other countries, not least the United States. From the very beginning of our history as a Nation we have looked hopefully to the East. The clipper ships, bearing their cargoes of silver and ginseng to Canton and returning loaded with tea and silks, expressed an urge which has remained with the American people. And in proclaiming the Open Door doctrine, as he did at the turn of the last century, John Hay was only voicing a policy which the United States had always favored if never before so clearly expressed.

The Open Door is now closed. All American trade with China must now pass through corridors guarded by Japanese bayonets and subject to Japan's conception of self-interest. What happened in Manchuria, following the Mukden incident of 1931, now threatens to be repeated on a gigantic scale in the vast area below the Great Wall. And that will be true whether China fights on or not and will only be changed if as a result of exhaustion Japan is finally forced to relinquish the iron grip she now has on her continental neighbor. There is no sign of that exhaustion today and before it comes Chinese resistance may collapse.

The United States must now reckon with the enormously important possibility that all of Eastern Asia will soon be in the grip of Japan, giving that power a base for commercial expansion in other parts of world, including Latin America.

The prospects are made more unpalatable by the fact that had it not been for the material assistance we have rendered the Japanese the conquest of China could never have been brought to the present point.

In refusing to make any distinction in Asia between aggressor and victim we have helped ruin not only China but our own present and potential interests in that land, to say nothing of imperiling our heretofore favored position nearer home.

Organic Architecture

Frank Lloyd Wright, the famous architect, was a little hard on Williamsburg in asserting there that the chief value of the meticulous restoration undergone by the town is to "show us how little we need this type of architecture now."

Citizens of the ancient capital of Virginia, now a mecca for tourists from every section of the country, could reply with justification that the work of reproduction sponsored by Mr. Rockefeller has definite economic value for them, aesthetic issues entirely aside. And while the Colonial restoration of Williamsburg has unquestionably given the little town the appearance of a museum piece, it is not apparent that this has made life there less attractive to the residents.

The plea for "organic architecture" is, of course, well taken. A definite part of the present revival in home construction should be an effort to identify new dwellings with the conditions and spirit of twentieth century America. Imitations of Colonial homes, of early New England farmhouses, of Elizabethan manor houses or French chateaux are all, as Mr. Wright indicates, out of place. They are mere reproductions, lacking vitality and often functionally unsuited to their environment.

But Williamsburg, which is an intentional if somewhat precious effort to restore the settings of a by-gone age, is not the most logical place to advocate a modernistic architecture, indigenous, democratic and free. That plea could be more effectively made here in Washington, beside a great Cathedral in the authentic tradition of English Gothic, or among streets of Government buildings which follow the pattern of imperial Rome.

Indeed there will soon be one peculiarly appropriate location for the lecture on organic architecture with which Mr. Wright startled the burgers of Williamsburg. That is the steps of the forthcoming Jefferson Memorial on the Tidal Basin. There, with peculiar and devastating fitness, Mr. Wright might hold forth on the theory that "the extraneous application of a culture not our own is all wrong."

Mr. Dewey's Strategy

The effectiveness of Thomas E. Dewey's campaign speeches is attested by the way in which Gov. Lehman is resorting to personal attacks upon his opponent instead of relying upon his own record, as intended. Presumably the reason for this change of front is that Mr. Dewey, in a series of compact speeches bristling with facts and virtually devoid of generalized indictments, has made the Governor's record extremely difficult to defend.

A recent speech dealing with New York's budgetary situation provides an excellent example of Mr. Dewey's methods. He explains quite simply how the deficit was cut down by a few simple expedients such as deferring certain payments, advancing the date of certain tax collections and counting as receipts Federal funds not yet received. Moreover, the executive budget takes no account of nearly $200,000,000 of net debt, incurred for relief purposes with the approval of the voters since Gov. Lehman assumed office.

As the facts cited are matters of official record, Gov. Lehman's reply is inevitably weak. Indeed, he is forced to try to divert attention from the record by accusing Mr. Dewey of "complete ignorance of the finances of the State." "Mr. Dewey does not know," he says, "that every detail of my six executive budgets, and every part of the financial plan covering both expenditures and revenues, were described at great length in my budget messages to the Legislature."

As a matter of fact, Mr. Dewey was very careful to point out that there was nothing secret about the expedients employed to make the deficit vanish. "Each time the Governor adopted such a device he explained it all in his budget messages," Mr. Dewey says. "I don't mean to suggest that there was anything wrong about it. But it did have one result and one only. It made the books of the State look better. It reduced the deficit on paper, but it didn't put the State in any better financial position."

Those who suspect the bookkeeping methods of the Federal Government would be well-advised to learn from Mr. Dewey's technique. There is no falsification of accounts, no lack of information available to the initiated. But to those who lack the capacity for critical analysis and comparison our Federal finances can unfortunately be made to look much better than they actually are. In stripping away some of the pretenses that have enabled Gov. Lehman to boast of balancing his budget, Mr. Dewey has, therefore, made a real contribution to better understanding of the general financial situation.

In refusing to belittle the character of his opponent, or cast aspersions upon the high motives animating Gov. Lehman, Mr. Dewey has also followed a wise procedure. On most important issues of social and economic policy men of intelligence are today likely to be in rather close agreement, certainly as regards objectives. Yet too often progressive Republicans have permitted themselves to be maneuvered into a position of general antagonism to all the policies and programs endorsed by those in power.

Mr. Dewey has skillfully avoided falling into this trap by refusing to permit his opponent to claim a monopoly of humanitarian impulses. Instead, he has looked at the inadequate record of accomplishment, contrasting it with promises, and he has stressed the adverse influence of corrupt local political machines.

While successful administration of laws is no guarantee of good government, it is certain that the best intentions of the would-be reformer amount to little if the enforcement agencies prove venal or inefficient. That is the lesson Mr. Dewey is hammering home so assiduously in his addresses to the voters of New York State. His methods are not only sound strategy but they strike at the very heart of the problems that confront the Nation today.

Progressive elements in the Republican Party, often unjustly identified with those who have no wish to assist social and economic reforms, will undoubtedly be encouraged by the emergence of a discriminating opposition that refuses to be classified as obstructionist and reactionary.

Puerto Rican Projects

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your readers may be interested in knowing that the Federal Government is going to remove a mountain in Puerto Rico. It really isn't a mountain, but we consider high hills mountains here and can see no reason why it should not be transferred to fill in a mangrove swamp.

The project has been developed as a means of creating an urban site within the city limits of San Juan and both the made land and the place where the mountain now stands is to be utilized for low cost housing projects. I suspect that it will be hard to find a duplication of this project in any PWA work on the mainland.

I am afraid, however, that the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration will again fail to attain its objective in slum clearance, as it has in other low cost housing projects. We have a very fine apartment building in San Juan and near the capital city is Eleanor Roosevelt City. Both were visualized as slum clearance projects, but the type of construction (concrete) is altogether too expensive for occupancy by dwellers in Puerto Rico slums. The San Juan building faces one of the worst slums in the city, and it was constructed to move the people resident in this slum area from the tide-invaded flats upon which they live. When completed the building was fully occupied, but not a single slum dweller left the Puerto de Tierra section. The rental differential was too great. In the beautiful little city named for the wife of the President the same failure to meet the need of those most needing help is evidenced. The new city is one of the neatest and most attractive of San Juan's suburbs, a beautiful little town in all the word implies—but it is far from being a slum clearance project.

Our slum dweller requires small frame structures that can be rented for a few dollars a month. The PRRA builds durable and attractive concrete bungalows in modernistic style that are, from the slum dweller's standpoint, definitely high hat. We move a mountain, get excellent returns in needed wages paid to workers, but very little of practical value for our money. The Federal agencies devote hundreds of thousands of dollars to essential repairs to old walls, to ancient structures housing soldiers and officers, new streets in the army section, but practically nothing for the very poor people. The Army seems to be able to withdraw PRRA funds almost at will, but regulations are cited to justify refusal to disburse money in the interest of the tourist industry many people visualize as embodying prospects of growing into a business second only in cash returns to sugar.

I am hoping that you will be able to afford space for my letter and that it will gain the attention of a practical minded public administrator. I greatly fear that administrators furnished Puerto Rico have been just the slightest bit visionary and impractical.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest and some feeling of disgust the un-American letter published in your paper on September 27. The letter is signed Carl A. Neibling, president of he German League of the United States.

By its publication is clearly shown the great freedom of speech and the press existing in this country, compared with the restriction prevailing in Germany and other countries of Europe. Think of such a letter as that of Mr. Neibling being published in Germany (if possible) reflecting on the press there and, indirectly, on the state, and the writer signing same as President of the United States League of Germany. The concentration camp (if nothing worse) would soon hide him from view, and his organization (if possible to be formed there) would be at once broken up and its members penalized.

Mr. Neibling appears to think the press should be controlled in this country, as in Germany; yet he takes advantage of its freedom in his tirade published. He displayed such prejudice, perverted reason and ignorance of facts that it is pitiable.

May I ask why should there be a "German League" or any other national league in this country if all are truly American citizens and owe their allegiance to no other country? If not, they should return to the country they love most and submit to its oppression.

Defends Correspondents

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been a regular reader of The Post for years and enjoy the letters to the editor, although many of them do not coincide with my way of thinking. But when one is so raw as the letter written by the person signing himself or herself C. E. M., I think it time to raise a kick.

He (or she) cannot be a true American. If he (or she) does not like the indignant, resentful attitude of the "natives," let him (or her) take his (or her) overestimated intelligence out of the country. We are American citizens and speak as we see, without any regard to "isms." Also, we sign our full names to what we write.

Traffic Enforcement Mores

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter in The Post October 21 by Mr. Sparks is food for thought for the Traffic Department in Washington. I will go him one better.

I have been driving in Washington for more than 15 years and have always been very careful and have never had any accidents or trouble. About one month ago I was coming up M street southwest one Sunday night. I had plenty of time and was in no hurry, but if I had been, I would, as I have always done, kept within the speed limit. I was in the back of a police scout car that was driving 10 miles per hour. I stayed in back of it for one block and then decided to pass it. I continued to drive 20 miles per hour, not 22 or 19, but exactly 20 miles.

When I arrived at Water street, I put out my hand and stopped at the stop sign there and waited until I had clear traffic and proceeded, turning right into Water street. I had to turn right or left or go into the river.

Before I reached Seventh street this scout car came alongside and told me to pull over to the curb. An officer got out and came over to my car. I asked him what the trouble was and without replying to my question he asked for my permit, etc. He then told me I was going 32 miles an hour in a 22-mile zone. I told him I was sure I wasn't going more than 20 and I thought my speedometer was correct. I later had it tested and it proved to be all right.

He then informed me that I failed to signal when I turned into Water street, which I admitted. But that wasn't any crime, because anyone in back of me knew that I had to turn right or left or go into the river. I asked him if he was sure he had the right car and he stated that he did. I told him I passed him about ten blocks back and would not be such a fool as go 32 miles just after that. At length he decided to waive both.

This sort of thing certainly is disgusting to a careful motorist. If I had been speeding he would not have waived the charge and no officer would have, either.

And, as Mr. Sparks states, it seems like the motorists in Washington have no defense when stopped and taken into court by an officer. His words are ignored while the officers are always right. It is high time more attention be paid to the crime wave and less to parked cars and petty violations. After all, there are very few parked cars that hurt anyone.

In Defense Of Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent who signs his letter "Wantmore Truth" is an excellent jingo, so excellent that I wonder how much munitions stock he holds. However, in his glowing eulogies to the warmakers as creators of culture through the ages, he shows a total ignorance of one very important fact in history.

He cites the thousands of years of strife and bloodshed of ancient Greece and Rome, medieval Spain, Elizabethan England, ancient Egypt and the Reign of Terror as evidences of progress, but where are all of those mighty warlike nations today? If war and bloodshed are such true producers of human betterment, why have the civilizations of the warrior nations perished, while the civilization of the Chinese still flourishes after 4,000 years of living as a peaceful race?

Since it was the custom of conquering invaders of these eras to decree that the writers, minstrels, musicians, artists, sculptors and other recorders of history should pay them tribute in kind, it was only natural that a system of immortalizing the butchers of the races should develop. It is hardly likely that the Caesars and Napoleons, at the time of their triumph, would have tolerated any peaceful citizen being given the recognition that the warmakers demanded for themselves. It is safe to say that any culture and progress that come out of these countries was in spite of wars that prevailed, and not because of wars.

Japan And Hawaii

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This writer wishes to express his appreciation and gratitude to the editor of The Post for printing, and to "One Hundred Per Cent American" for writing the letter in The Post, October 14. For sometime now we have been looking for some reader comment and editorial, likewise, on what is going to happen when the United States is called upon to make its contribution to the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis. The United States, as usual, is asleep at the switch. With Japan emboldened by the British-French collapse, seizing South China, how long is it going to be before Japan demands the Hawaiian Islands and a plebiscite upon the West Coast? The Japanese have always claimed that Hawaii should have been theirs and the Japanese population of Hawaii equals the combined population of all the other races put together.

It is quite noticeable that there has been very little agitation for statehood from Hawaii since Roosevelt visited there. Who wants two Japanese Senators and a half-dozen Japanese Representatives in Congress?

After all the hair-brained utterances by our high officials, it will be very interesting to see what they will really do when the Japanese end of the axis pulls the Hitler act on the U. S. A. That they will do the Chamberlain act and cry peace at any price is an almost sure bet. No wonder "men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking upon the things that are coming upon the earth."

La Sontata

SHE CAME to Washington recently with a carnival—a small affair; they called it a marine circus. She was the chief attraction, although the circus boasted an embalmed whale whose odor insulted the four winds of heaven, some sad bits of flotsam, such as a mermaid girl, a flea circus and the original draft of Popeye, the Sailor.

I was in a palpitant state when I stepped into the room where she was, and waited with a jittering heart while Popeye smoked his pipe, ate his spinach, swallowed his nose, and finally swallowed his face. We were then asked to direct our gaze to the low wooden platform where behind a curtain she sat, dignified and solitary.

My anticipation of the horror behind the curtain became so acute that when the burlap was at last withdrawn and La Sontata finally presented, my surface consciousness was for a moment bedimmed, and beads of sweat rose on my brow. When the mists cleared, a lovely girl with ghoulish eyes and wearing a nurse's uniform was telling Sontata's story.

A simple young woman, Sontata was once, working in a munitions plant outside of Paris. Yes, until just two years and eight months ago she had been at work, like you or me or anybody. And then one day there was an accident. It crushed the poor Santata's head so badly that the doctors immediately decided if they were to save her life she must lose her head—they would have to amputate! If she had a family no doubt their consent was obtained; if she had a husband he certainly sold her down the Seine.

Ah, those clever French doctors! They had seen at once that the nerve centers weren't injured, and that by removing the head and saving the nerves intact, the Sontata could be kept alive. Hooray for Science. If life was henceforth to be a little less interesting for Sontata herself, c'est domamge, but that is of course no concern of Science.

So there she sat, a large and shapely girl, with a fine, full bosom, wearing a black slip that exposed shoulders, armpits and knees, and quite beautiful really, except that she had no head. Not even a neck. Above her well-built shoulders, around what was once her neck—lovely no doubt and firm as a tower of David—a towel was draped; above the towel rose three or four red rubber tubes joining Sontata to a machine on the platform that looked like a large radio set.

Meanwhile the ghoul-eyed blonde—heavy blue-eye make-up gives her the effect—was explaining that Sontata was fed through her veins, by what she called an "intravenous feeder" (the radio box), that the doctor now in attendance hoped to keep her alive indefinitely, but of course they didn't know. Anything might happen. Anything except brain fever or a head cold. But things looked hopeful at present, and if all goes well Sontata will be taken to the World Fair in New York in 1939. I strained to catch the doctor's name—but the buzzing in my head was just then magnified by another attendant stepping onto the platform and snapping on the juice in the feeder. A bulb turned red and Sontata started to move.

La pauvre Sontata! I couldn't bear to look and I couldn't tear my fascinated gaze away. She raised her hands to her bosom and wrung them in a suffering manner. Her fingers looked a little blue. She moved her feet pathetically, squirming and scraping her toes. Poor toes encased in black suede shoes. Poor buxom legs exposed and bare whereon the goose-flesh rose. It was a dismal sight, my friends, and I felt ashamed that the men in the audience should view a woman in such a case; so more than nude, so bereft, so helpless in her nudity. Anyway, she commenced to slap Sontata's legs and fleshly upper arms, and lo, the flesh resounded with a living smacking sound! The under attendant snapped off the feeder, Sontata composed herself slowly, dropping her blue-fingered hands in her lap, and the ghoul took up her wrist and appeared to listen to the pulse beat. The show was over. I threw one wild look at the audience—a crowd of strangely unmoved blockheads—and made a dash for the outer air and the friendly night.

I have not yet ceased to speak of Sontata. By day I tell my friends about her, and often between the strokes of night I see—her face. She's the darling of my chamber of horrors, and struts with Dracula, the Phantom of the Opera and Dr. Sesbury's white zombies. People have strange reactions to the tale of a living woman without a head. They take it for granted she's a monstrous hoax and invariably set about, by conjecture and surmise, to find the solution. And some of the solutions offered me are strong and morbid stuff.

In general I keep an open mind and laugh with Sontata's deriders. But when I am alone with my mind Sontata is a real girl, pathetically headless; her soul dispossessed, its earthly mansion shattered, and an aimless, bewildered Psyche waits for Sontata to die. Of course, I don't openly confess all that. I know two women who have seen her and they would pull your hair for doubting that Sontata lives, and after a fashion, breathes. One of these said to me in a frenzy of indignation: "But I heard the doctor's name! I'm going to write to him. And besides, didn't Lindbergh keep a chicken's heart alive?" She's going to write to the doctor. I'm going to write to Lindbergh and tell him he's a bush leaguer.

Glorifying The Bum

THERE IS a down-under school of writing in this country which counterfeits ability with dirty words and blandly helps itself to the assumption that because the world is out of step with a small element of congenital bums, drunkards and thieves the world is in the wrong.

Conclusions are not given, but there is a tendency to argue that communism is the only answer, although there is no evidence from those who have written either for or against communism that the no-goods, incompetents and misanthropes fare any better in the USSR than they do here.

PERSONS WHO have seen bums only in the phony soulfulness of the fiction version created by the dirty-neck and flannel-shirt literati are at a disadvantage in the presence of such reading, for they have no background of personal observation or experience. They fall easily for a suggestion that there but for the grace of God go they, which could be so in certain individual cases, forgetting, however, that character, diligence and determination are forces which will always stand between most men and the jungle.

Others, however, who know better, knowing that bums are not local to the United States but exist in all countries which permit men to become bums if that is their bent, instead of forcing them into the ranks or the dead storage camps of the dictator, are not deceived.

THERE IS NO more truth in the thought that a bum is a bum from choice of circumstances and from no causes existing within himself than there is in the old American superstition that gypsies kidnap children, preferably children with golden hair and blue eyes.

Possibly some gypsies did kidnap some children a long time ago, but from the time of Charlie Ross on down through the cases of Katherine Winters, Billy Whitla and Bobby Glass, gypsies have in no famous instance been shown responsible. One wretched father pursued to central Europe and Central America rumors that his little boy had been seen in the camps of gypsies, only to find the child's skeleton years afterward in a Pennsylvania mountain thicket not a mile from the summer cottage from which he had wandered off.

THE BIOGRAPHY of Jack London, the Boswell of the bums, reveals not only an understanding of the type but a community of traits, and while it were inhuman to lack pity for the misery of the mildewed bo, as for any suffering creature, it does not follow that to deny him heroic qualities is to cheat him of his due.

There was for a considerable time an Alaskan school of writing known, I believe, as the "God, How the Wind Blew!" School, which would have endowed with superhuman qualities every man who took part in the gold rush. In after years the members of this helter-skelter community by common consent standardized their lies about the hardships and privations of those days in that frozen land, but, unfortunately for my own illusions, two of the veterans whom I knew best were two of the most fluent and imaginative liars I ever knew and the third had spent most of his time tending bar and dealing bank in a gambling house.

ALL OF THEM were, barring very brief ventures out of doors, strictly house-cat prospectors who did their adventuring close to a red hot stove, and one often related with no qualms, even after all that time, that his most dependable source of revenue was the cheating of real prospectors who had risked chilblain and all of the trail through short-weight when weighing their pokes of dust.

He may have been lying about that, too, but the truth never was in the man, and his morals were such that he was once filed away in a prison to repent.

THE LITERATURE of degradation and filth, moral and physical, is not to be rejected outright merely because it is what it is, but the attempt to blame it all on something called the system or on the cruelty and indifference of people who are busy working out their own problems as well as their opportunities, intelligence and ability permit is subject to challenge.

Policemen and flophouse keepers develop a heartlessness toward bums as a class through practical experience, and no doubt their attitude is too general, for occasionally there must come along a stray whose greasy shirt covers a heart of gold. But, in general, bums are just that, and the most notorious bum that the newspaper business produced in the days of the tramp reporter, though he came of an eminent, not to say good, family and could prattle Shakespeare, married women only to live on their hard-earned wages and was the more of a bum for the contrast between his advantages and the mess he was.

'No. 2 Adviser'

By Ernest K. Lindley

It's Harry L. Hopkins

PERIODICALLY during the last four years the title "No. 1 adviser to the President" has been conferred by political writers on Harry L. Hopkins. There have been many competitors for that distinction, but, one by one, most of them have faded from view or by common consent have been graded a litle lower than "No. 1." If a trophy went with the unofficial awarding of the title, Mr. Hopkins by now would be entitled to permanent possession of it.

Actually, as all close observers know, the President's advisers never stratify into a hierarchy. That the influence of Cabinet members and heads of special agencies is less than it would be under a more formal administrator has long been recognized. At the same time, the groups of important advisers of lower official status have always been fluid. The President is decidedly informal and personal about both policy making and administration. He seeks information and opinion directly from all kinds of sources. Several of his advisers are foremost in the particular fields in which they are expert but none is on all fronts.

THE WORD "adviser," even when coupled with "No. 1," does not accurately describe the peculiarly intimate relationship of Mr. Hopkins to the President. In the first place, Mr. Hopkins is a loyal protege of the President's. With Frances Perkins, Henry Morgenthau, jr. and James A. Farley, he belongs to the group that Mr. Roosevelt brought with him from Albany to Washington.

Of this group, Mr. Hopkins was the one whom Mr. Roosevelt knew least well. They had met once in 1928, but Mr. Hopkins did not enter the official family in Albany until the fall of 1931 when he organized the State Relief Administration. His connections with the Presidential campaign of 1932 were only incidental. He was brought to Washington in 1933 solely because of the good impression he had made on Mr. Roosevelt as an administrator.

WITH THE EXCEPTION of NRA, which swamped Hugh S. Johnson, and, possibly, the agricultural program, Mr. Hopkins took on the toughest administrative assignment in the New Deal. He has survived more than five years of heavy political crossfire, and is recognized by both friends and critics as an exceptionally able man. And with his ability has been coupled a loyalty for which the President must be extremely grateful. For so many of his lieutenants during the last five years have been the kind who will not stop arguing when a decision has been made. Mr. Hopkins usually has decided views and expresses them straightforwardly and pithily, but whether he has won or lost in his arguments over policy, he always has carried out his orders faithfully, promptly, and without complaint.

But Mr. Hopkins' official loyalty and administrative ability do not account entirely for the position which he now occupies. For he has become both a "friend of the family" and a companion to the President—a double distinction which is held by no one else among the members of the Cabinet and heads of special agencies except the Secretary of the Treasury, who has been a Dutchess County neighbor of the Roosevelts for many years. Mrs. Roosevelt's profound interest in the relief problem probably had much to do, in the first instance, with drawing Mr. Hopkins into the more intimate White House circle. But he has been securely fixed there for several years as a friend—of Mrs. Roosevelt, of James Roosevelt and his wife, Betsey, and, most important, of the President.

GRADUALLY, it has become apparent that the President enjoys the companionship of Mr. Hopkins. As any number of wealthy anti-New Dealers in Palm Beach and Saratoga and on Long Island have found out, there is nothing drab or heavy-handed about the WPA administrator. He can relax and be gay. He can talk very intelligently without being dull—in fact, with pleasing piquancy. He has also a very considerable capacity for cutting through complicated problems. He has a quick flexible mind, great energy and enthusiasm, and as an administrator he can change pace or direction instantly.

These are all qualities which can be found in the President as well as in Harry Hopkins. The truth seems to be that in Mr. Hopkins he has found a mind that runs with his.

IT HAS BEEN generally supposed that when the new Cabinet post of Secretary of Welfare is authorized by Congress, Mr. Hopkins will receive the appointment. In fact, he has been attending Cabinet meetings, when he has been in Washington, for almost a year. Alternatively, when he has been talked about for half a dozen other positions in the Administration. The New Dealers who would like to see him nominated as Mr. Roosevelt's successor realize that his association with the relief program is a liability as well as an asset. Unquestionably, his very real talents would show up in any public office.

What ambitions, if any, the President entertains for Harry Hopkins remains a Presidential secret. He has made no secret, however, of his high regard for Mr. Hopkins' intelligence and practical judgment. If Mr. Hopkins is not the President's No. 1 adviser, he at least looks suspiciously like his No. 1 pupil.

Each Day Holiday In November, if You Travel Fast

Every day is a holiday in the month of November, but you'll have to do some fast traveling if you want to take advantage of them.

It may be Argentina or it may be Tanganyika, but some nation in the world is celebrating a holiday each day next month, a list of bank and public holidays throughout the world, released yesterday by the Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, revealed.

It might give the workingman a hard time, but it's the answer to a traveling man's prayer. The holiday-bent individual can pick anyone of 55 countries—or the State of Louisiana—on the first of November, all of which are taking the day off. The traveler can celebrate proletarian day in Russia, discovery day in Dominica, four different independence days, four thanksgiving days—to say nothing of election day, November 8, in 33 of the 48 States. Armistice Day, November 11, and Thanksgiving Day, November 24, also are to be considered.

After Hankow

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

A Pyrrhic Victory For Japan

Special Correspondence of The Post

(Editor's Note: In this article, written September 9, Mr. Ginsbourg, The Post's special correspondent at Shanghai, considers the potential consequences of the capture of Hankow by the Japanese, a development which has now taken place.)

Shanghai, Sept. 9.

ONCE Hankow falls, Chinese troops will roll back to the mountains of Szechuan; Japanese spokesmen will unburden themselves of jubilant comments on the prowess of the imperial army, and the blood-drenched history of the Sino-Japanese war will enter a new stage.

Occupation of Hankow will mean much to Japan. All of her economic and military resources have been mobilized for the current drive up the Yangtze River. All Japan has has been staked on this victory.

Tokyo signed a truce with Moscow in mid-August, not because Japan does not intend to fight Russia, but because the Yangtze campaign outweighed all other considerations.

For the sake of the military operations in central China, Japan accepted terms which a year ago she would have deemed intolerably humiliating. Also for the sake of the drive Hankowward, Tokyo for once took determined steps to muzzle the powerful, Red-baiting Kwantung army in Manchuria.

Few people abroad realized that the sanguinary clashes on the Soviet-Manchurian border early in August were provoked by the Kwantung army to escape compliance with Tokyo's orders for the disapatch of a strong contingent to assist in the drive up the Yangtze River.

Kwantung army leaders believed that major battles on the Soviet border would impress the general staff in Tokyo with the seriousness of the Russian menace and lead to a cancellation of the orders to rush reinforcements to central China.

TOKYO thought otherwise. The heart of the omnipotent war council, which decides Japan's destinies, has been set on the capture of Hankow as the only apparent way out of the precarious situation in which Japan finds herself today.

Thus, after a fortnight of desperate underground maneuvers, Tokyo finally succeeded in reining the Kwantung army and reaching an agreement with Moscow. Sufficient pressure was then exerted on the Kwantung army to secure compliance with Tokyo's wishes.

With the fall of Hankow, the Kwantung army's obligations will come to an end and it will resume its preparations for Der Tag, when Nipponese armies will march across the border into coveted Siberia.

Public morale, which showed a perceptible weakening following the occupation of Hsuchow on May 20, has again been brought to a fever pitch by official and press predictions that China's resistance will collapse the day Japanese troops capture Hankow.

A few sober declarations by men aware of Japan's military and financial difficulties failed to curb the current orgy of optimistic predictions.

Seihio Ikeda, who came to the ministry of finance from the overlordship of the House of Mitsui, warned the nation on August 30 that the fall of Hankow would not bring a relaxation of the stringent economic restrictions clamped on Japan's economy as the result of the war.

The fall of Hankow, he in effect told his co-nationals, is not synonymous with the fall of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, whose campaign of resistance would continue for years to come.

"WE MUST BE prepared for a long period of construction in which all the resources at our disposal will be required," he said. "Moreover, the army will have to be stationed in the occupied areas to maintain peace and order there at least for some time to come, and we must bear the expenses of keeping it there . . .

"And it is not only China that we must reckon with. As we must be adequately prepared for defense against the Soviet Union, we may even have to strengthen our control over materials, but on this point nothing is as yet definite."

This warning was supplemented by an equally well-informed person—War Minister Lieut. Gen. S. Itagaki—whom defeat at Taierchwang did not deter from promotion. Military operations, he said, will not stop when Hankow falls. They will be continued until the Chinese government is crushed.

"Japan alone," he added, "will be the judge of when that has been accomplished."

But these voices could not counteract the intoxication produced by Japan's superefficient propaganda machinery, which has succeeded all too well in convincing people that the war would end with the entry of Nipponese troops into the Yangtze city.

In seven or eight weeks these propagandists will have to do some desperate thinking to prevent a tragic relapse which will follow the realization that China's resistance has not been broken.

And at this moment it seems certain that the fall of Hankow will not end the war. Badly battered, the Chinese troops will fall back upon new defense lines south, west and northwest of the abandoned capital and prepare themselves for new battles.

There might be a perceptible dent in the Chinese army's morale, but it will not be as deep or lasting as the one caused ten months earlier by the tragedy at Nanking. In a few weeks the Chinese troops will have been reinforced, rested and ready for war.

The Japanese high command will discover—as it has already to its dismay found in North China—that it can hold major cities, but that the hinterland and the channels of communication will remain under Chinese control.

JAPANESE garrisons will be sprinkled along the banks of the Yangtze River and Japanese gunboats will afford reasonable protection to troop and munitions transports plying between Shanghai and Hankow, but the vast and fertile lands on both sides of the river will remain in Chinese hands.

It was in the mountains of Kiangsi Province that Chinese Communist troops successfully defied Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's picked troops for seven years. From these bases, Gen Chiang's forces will now stage lightning raids upon Japanese garrisons, supply trains, merchants and transports, effectively blocking the restoration of peace, which Japan must have before she can hope to digest what she has swallowed.

If the Japanese high command has difficulty in protecting its lines of communication and transportation in North China, it will find it well-nigh impossible to protect adequately its life arteries in the newly-ravaged territory.

When Japanese troops occupied Shanghai, Hangchow and Nanking they found little property that could recompense them for the terrifying cost of war. In Hankow they will find nothing. Evacuation of industrial property from the city was begun months ago. Textile mills, silk filatures, soap factories, machine shops and whole arsenals are being moved many hundreds of miles west and south of the battle zone, far from Japanese hands.

Moreover, there can be no doubt that the Chinese will not hesitate to make Chinese-governed portions of Hankow an object lesson in their scorched-earth" policy, which provides for destruction of all forms of property that cannot be moved elsewhere.

Hankow will be an empty shell when tired Japanese soldiers march in to reap the rewards of victory. They will not even have the satisfaction of flesh they reportedly had in Nanking in the unhappy months of December to February last.

AWARE of Japanese frightfulness in the occupied towns, and still more terrified by Chinese propaganda, the civilian population will not be in Hankow to welcome the victor, come to establish lasting peace in east Asia. Riffraff alone will remain to loot and rob and to participate in the Japanese-sponsored administration.

As in Shanghai, the Japanese will again come into a sharp conflict with foreign powers, which have important interests in the Hankow area. Such trouble-laden issues as navigation on the Yangtze, foreign travel in the interior and violation of various vested rights will come to the fore to plague Tokyo at a moment when it will desire it the least.

Finally, the Japanese general staff will have to map plans for a new campaign against Chinese troops entrenched in the inaccessible mountains of Szechuan and the rugged terrain of Kansu, Kweichow and Kwangsi. With a clash with Britain as a distinct possibility, plans will have to be drafted for an attack on Canton. (Canton fell to the Japanese on October 21—Ed.) And the harassed treasury officials will tax their ingenuity to the limit in an effort to find funds necessary for another year of war.

This is not to say that the fall of Hankow will not seriously hit the Chinese government. In every respect Hankow's loss will be sorely felt. European and American arms now flowing into China over the Canton-Hankow Railway will be reduced to a trickle, entering China by devious routes. The fall of Hankow will signify the loss of such important routes of transportation as the railway linking the Yellow and Yangtze rivers and of the latter river itself.

From its stronghold in the wilderness of Szechuan, the Chinese command will find it difficult to keep in touch with and to direct the innumerable guerrilla units waging relentless war on the invaders throughout China.

DRIVEN from yet another rich province, the Chinese government will lose an appreciable portion of its revenues. Also lost will be many of the products which China is now shipping abroad to secure the much-needed munitions.

And, finally, the withdrawal of the Chinese government to a point 1,000 miles west of Shanghai might result in popular lethargy, which would assist the Japanese in forming new puppet governments and strengthening old ones.

But whatever China's sufferings and sacrifices, the struggle will be continued indefinitely, to Japan's exhaustion. What a year ago seemed to be an idle dream of Gen. Chiang and his Communist allies is coming true today.

China's armies have withstood the severe battering given them by Nippon's juggernaut. China's popular psychology has undergone a complete metamorphosis under the impact of war. And China's will to resist has not been broken by successive defeats on the field of battle.

It is perhaps with a realization of social changes in progress in China that Gen. Itagaki a fortnight ago boldly retracted his government's boycott of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and announced his willingness to discuss peace terms with the Chinese leader, "if and when."

It seems certain that Gen. Chiang will not respond to such overtures. The war, therefore, must go on, with the resultant destruction in China and a major political, social and economic crisis in Japan. The future looks equally dark for both nations.

Gripe From The Golden State

There is a growing tradition that Southern California is a fertile breeding ground for crackpots and their fantastic schemes. Sad to say our local newspapers are all too prone to concur in the gentle indictment.

I believe a vigorous and convincing defense is easily possible were it worth the while. This garden spot of ours may have its full quota of crackpots, but certainly it is far from having a monopoly on them. For instance, I am reminded that Father Divine's inanities were treated with respect in some pretty high Eastern ivory towers. As for Father Divine's neighbor, one F. D. R., if Southern California can produce any crackier pots than the NRA, the AAA, and other fantastic abracadabra, we'll have to put on a lot more crews and work in 24-hour shifts.

Books And Things

Cause Celebre

RACHEL FIELD dug into her own family's past and found gold, and of that family gold she built her novel, "All This, and Heaven, Too" (Macmillan, $2.50).

For Henriette Desportes, heroine of this romantic story, married the Rev. Henry Martyn Field, Rachel Field's great-uncle. She was, in fact, tried in Paris for complicity in the murder of the Duchesse de Praslin in those mid-century days when thrones were toppling; she did, in fact, emigrate to New York and there marry the brother of the Cyrus Field who laid the Atlantic cable; and she, who had brought up the children of a duke, had her struggles as wife of a New England village parson.

I suspect that the real Henriette was a less entertaining and lovable person than the Henriette whom Rachel Field creates.

HERE SHE APPEARS a gallant, hopeless girl of 28, returning from eight years as a governess in England to take a similar position in France. And reading to her new French charges the old story of the fairy godmother who offered a choice—happiness while young, or happiness when old, Henriette, who saw no hope of young happiness for herself, was ready to accept it at the end; the children thought it foolish to wait so long; and the Duc de Praslin, tiptoeing into the room, smiled at the argument.

He had married for money, and he did not love his wife, who yearned to possess him with a love that became almost a disease, just as she demanded all the affection of all her children, bitterly resenting the very virtues of her governess. "She'd give her very life for those she loves," her friends said of her. "Who wouldn't?" Henriette thought. "It's much more difficult to live and let live."

Henriette let her charges live, and they loved her for it. So, inevitably, did the duke. The duchess did not. Miss Field handles the long struggle well. Perhaps there is a shade too much the New Englander in her Paris story; just, possibly, the Paris cynics were right in their Parisian suspicions. At such points, in a novel built upon facts, the reader has a right to argue. But he cannot argue long; Miss Field has created her own character, if not her own circumstances. Mrs. Belloc Lowndes and Edmund Lester Pearson and others have treated, in their own way, the story of the final tragedy which became the talk of Paris; Victor Hugo reported in his diary seeing the governess, suspected of complicity in murder, in the conciergerie. But Mlle. Desportes was released. Life in Paris was thenceforth impossible; she came to America, met again and later married the young clergyman whom she had already met at the home of her Protestant pastor in Paris.

Gallant Henriette still was. When rumors of her past crept into the select Gramercy Park Girls School where she taught, she consulted the principal, looked the girls in the face, told them, as if it were only a story, of the girl accused in Paris who had sought forgetfulness in America, and assured them that the end of the story was for them to act. They were her champions forever after.

It is not easy to round out such a story in novel form. The French years make the pattern of one story by themselves; the New England years form a pendant to Paris. But Henry and Henriette, in real life, came to New York. They heard Lincoln speak in Cooper Union; they agonized with Brother Cyrus when his Atlantic cables snapped or faded and people called him fool; they entertained Bryant, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Peter Cooper, Fanny Kemble—the notables of their day—in their home.

That story might have filled another volume; Miss Field tells it honestly and briefly. I think many readers will wish that she had departed from the record; when Henriette returned to Paris in exposition days, you passionately want her to rediscover the children whom she had loved, who loved her, in those far-off days before their mother met a mysterious death. For by that time you are almost as fond of Rachel Field's great-aunt Henrietta as is Miss Field herself; and you don't much care whether she is the lady of the records, or, like Kate Fortune in "Time Out of Mind," essentially Miss Field's own creation.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

On Witchcraft And Slavery

PROF. JAMES SHOTWELL had an article in the last Sunday magazine section of the New York Times under the title "Can We Conquer War As We Did Slavery?" Prof. Shotwell has been an everoptimistic champion of peace, and in this article he argues that since mankind has conquered two institutions that once shared the long history of war, we have reason to believe that war, too, will go the way of those once reputable pillars of society—witchcraft and slavery.

"Both of them go back to the savage past of mankind," says Prof. Shotwell. "Yet they were got rid of at the very time when they had apparently strengthened their hold . . . Witchcraft—this oldest orthodoxy—passed away overnight when rational thinking invaded the age-old routine of an ignorant world.

". . . And no one believes in slavery any longer, even in those parts of the civilized world where it was practiced last."

THE ARTICLE caught my attention and the argument interested me, because I would have said that although war may really be conquered "in our time," the other two institutions are enjoying a remarkable renaissance.

It is quite possible that war, that is to say, armed conflict, had passed the point where it is useful as an instrument of national and international policy. Mr. Henry Ford is the last person to assert confidently that there would be no more great wars. Perhaps he is right, since war can no longer be confined to the enemy's territory. If war is given up, however, it will not be because of reason but for quite pragmatic causes.

BUT THE OTHER ancient institutions, witchcraft and slavery, are taking the place of war and have even become instruments of national and international policy. I speak of these institutions in the exact dictionary sense of the word. Witchcraft is defined, in the new Oxford dictionary, as "the exercise of supernatural power supposed to be possessed by persons in league with the devil and evil spirits." And the same authority describes slavery as "the condition of being entirely subject to or dominated by some power or influence."

The leading example of modern witchcraft is anti-Semitism. It is tricked out by those who use it as an instrument of national policy with all the black magic that once was attributed to witches, alchemists, wizards and sorcerers.

Fifteen million Jews scattered around the world, most of them poor and none of them united, are supposed to hold the whole world in their grip and keep it subjected by an evil spell which is in turn responsible for capitalism, war, communism, racial degeneration, pacifism and plagues.

THE JEW is the sole source of all evil, and any communication with the race transmits a subtle poison to the communicator. No one with any Jewish blood ever finds peace within himself. An enemy is within his veins.

"Lost purity of blood disturbs the inner happiness forever," writes Hitler. "It sinks men down forever, and the results can never more be eradicated from body or from soul."

Like sorcerers, the Jews in this new witchcraft possess peculiarly seductive powers. They often appear as angels. Therefore primers and picture books are gotten out for little children to point out to them every real or imagined Jewish characteristic and prepare them to resist the evil eye.

ONE OF THESE picture books in my possession is a truly remarkable example of modern witch-baiting. The Jewish physician exists to lure non-Jews under the knife; the Jewish merchant to exploit his clients; the Jewish artist to pervert the senses.

Prof. Shotwell, speaking of ancient witchcraft, says, "It implanted itself firmly as one great body of ceremony that could offer escape from haunting fear." And that is precisely the function of this revived witchcraft. If one is protected against this particular evil eye, one is invulnerable and safe from everything. Certain ceremonies—significantly, the one of burnt offerings—serve to purify the soul and exorcise the evil eye. Hence the public holocausts of Jewish books.

The believers in this modern witchcraft are immune to reason on this particular subject, however rational they may be on every other matter under the sun. They are exactly like their forebears. The scientific mind was already awake when witches were burned in Salem, but the belief in magic flourished alongside it and often in the same bosom.

IT IS TRUE that in the civilized world one person may no longer possess by law the body and soul of another human being, but are not men and women enslaved in the exact sense of the word to the modern totalitarian state—a collective, rather than a personal, slavery?

Is not the "modern" citizen the "property of and entirely subject (to the collective), whether by capture, purchase, or birth"—to take another of the New Oxford's definitions?

He is compelled to work at wages fixed for him, and he may not strike against such conditions. He is not allowed to move his own person from one country to another, except as a granted privilege, and if he is on the land he may be compelled to remain there.

He is forced to produce according to the collective plan and to deliver to the state whatever portion of that production the state may from time to time decree.

He is not allowed to hold any belief contrary to the will of his master or to express himself in any way contrary to that will.

His children belong not to him nor to themselves, but to the state, and the individual's most intimate affairs, even his sexual life, is subject to decree. Is that or is it not slavery?

No, Prof. Shotwell! Perhaps we shall conquer war, but your analogies are dispiriting!

Same Menus Aid Fat Wife, Thin Husband

Calories in "Trimmings" Ingenuity Called For Extra Cost Unnecessary

By Ida Jean Kain.

HOW TO SOLVE the pressing problem of the fat wife and the thin husband on the slim pocketbook perplexes many a housewife.

The main difference between the meal that is fattening and the one that is "reducing" need not be in the menu itself. More often than not, the calories are upped by the way the foods are trimmed, and the choice of dessert. In both trimmings and desserts butter and cream are two of the most important items . . . and discretion in their use affords an easy and sure way of allocating the calories.

Husband Gets Cream

You need one quart of milk for the two of you. The thin member of the family, however, is entitled to the top half of the bottle, and you should take what is left—the skim milk, containing calcium and protein, but no fat calories. Your thin husband, you see, gets the cream!

The butter in the reducer's menu should be restricted to one and one-half pats per day, and this in itself is a saving. The thin member, however, should have two pats of butter per meal. Since butter and cream are easily digested forms of fat, they are an excellent means of increasing the calories for the thin person.

The question of the salad is still more easily solved. You should take your salad with vinegar and seasoning—nothing more—while your husband's salad should be literally floating on that good French dressing.

It is, admittedly, a nuisance to cream part of the vegetables and to serve the others plain, but it is worth the extra effort. And, if you are having peas or asparagus, serve his on a slice of hot buttered toast.

Cooking Important

The cooking of the vegetables is a very important matter, and when your budget is limited and you are trying so hard to buy the foods needed for health, it is a shame to waste the precious minerals and vitamins. The vegetables should be cooked rapidly in as little water as possible, and, when creamed, the water should be utilized for the sauce. Another way of saving the minerals and vitamins is by cooking the vegetables in parchment bags. You can purchase this parchment paper either in sheets or rolls.

Your dessert should never be anything but fruit, but the thin member of the family should have cream with his fruit and sometimes extra sugar.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Husband Asks How to Persuade Young Wife to Reduce; She's Grossly Fat From Overeating

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What can a man do with a fat wife who habitually eats all sorts of fattening foods and is constantly growing stouter and more shapeless? I have tried to effect a rational diet in our home by suggesting that I prefer fruit to pies and puddings and ice cream. I eat very little bread and potatoes and shun candy and cakes.

My wife was plump when we married five years ago, but now she is rolling in fat. She won't get weighed but I am sure she weighs at least 160 pounds—possibly more. She weighed 120 pounds when we married. As she is only 5 feet 1 inch in height, she has grown almost as thick as she is tall and has the formless figure of an old woman, although she is only 28. To make matters worse, when she is gorging herself with sweets, she persistently remarks that she will never starve herself as the stars in Hollywood do.

I asked our family physician to warn her against fattening foods and suggest to her that her health might be impaired by too much weight. She refused to be weighed in his office and will not have anything more to do with him. Some wag sent her a fat-girl comic valentine last year. I think she suspects I sent it, although she has never charged me openly with sending it.

My mother-in-law, who is rotund herself, persistently tells my wife that it is natural for her to be fat and that if she were to diet and reduce it would injure her health. I probably have been wrong in failing to discuss the subject with brutal frankness long ago. Can you suggest any alternative? I don't want to break up our marriage if there is any possible way to persuade my wife to follow a reasonable reducing plan under medical direction. Yours truly,

UNHAPPY HUSBAND.

Hazards of Obesity

DEAR UNHAPPY HUSBAND: It appears that this is a desperate situation requiring a desperate remedy. If you are to cure your wife of the vice of gluttony to which she is so wantonly committed, I believe you must confront her with the imminent prospect of losing your love and respect unless she inaugurates an immediate and lasting reform. There is an almost bestial lack of character and self respect in that person who refuses to impose a rational and moderate discipline upon his appetites of whatever sort.

One of the most challenging statements I ever read was that published in a woman's magazine a year or so ago, to the effect that it is character and not Providence which invests the woman of mature years with a graceful waist measurement. Ninety-nine women out of every hundred who possess enviable figure lines can testify to the unvarnished truth of this statement.

Moreover, it is a generally recognized fact that in the majority of modern marriages, wives begin to lose their grip on their husband's romantic affections the moment they begin to lose their figures, as the saying goes. The sad story of the wife who lost her husband's love to another woman because she was so lazy, so careless or so complacent as to "let herself go" immediately after marriage—neglecting her figure and her toilette until she became, in time, a gross caricature of her former self—is an integral part of twentieth century American folklore. It happens time and time again; and almost always in the face of the husband's earnest wish to be loyal.

Slovenly obesity as a result of self-indulgence is not only an affront to the senses, but it is a distinct liability to health—a fact which has been widely publicized of recent years by life insurance companies. It seems to be generally conceded by authoritative sources that the adult who is slightly underweight is a better health risk than the person who is excessively overweight. The reason should be obvious to the most unlettered layman. What should be the proper functioning of bodily organs is necessarily strained and impaired when subjected to the abnormal pressure of weighty layers of useless, pendulous fat. As a last academic gesture toward convincing your wife of the rash unwisdom of her gluttonous ways, you might present her with life insurance data concerning the health hazard of excess poundage.

If, after that, she continues to gorge herself on every delectable fattening food, I can only suggest that you challenge her with a studied withdrawal of affectionate tolerance. Her deliberate disregard of your entirely reasonable wishes invites such a reaction, so that she will have only herself to blame. And if, by such means, you are able to shock her into self assessment and concomitant self-discipline, you will have rendered her an invaluable social and physiological service. I recall having read, not long since, a wise and witty statement to the effect that most of us live on a fraction of what we eat, and the doctors live on the balance.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gentler Sex

The Listener

The woman on the couch, just back from Europe, is telling you all about the co-operatives in the Scandinavian countries. "It is simply fascinating what they are doing! Now take the apartment units—"Wait! What is that drifting from across the room?

"Mrs. Roosevelt . . . Mrs. Longworth . . . Say, do you want to know what Alice REALLY gets?"

You strain your ears, but all you hear is the woman leaning toward you on the couch. "Now in the apartments they're doing a most amazing thing! You see they build these units——"

"Is that so?" you repeat automatically, eagerly listening to the echoes.

"Well if Wally and the Queen get here at the same time . . . Oh, but really I have a friend who knows a man at the embassy and he said——"

The voices trail off. You hear only the drab tones of the woman beside you. "Now you see they organize these co-operative groups and then each investor——"

"How terribly interesting!" you exclaim. The echoes become more tantalizing.

"I wonder if she will marry Stokowski . . . well you know who the real one is don't you? Say, I have a friend who saw her on the boat—without her make-up you know—and I want to tell you——"

All is lost. You resign yourself to the woman on the couch. "Now what they have done in some of the slum areas is amazing. Now take their alley conditions——"

"Is that so?" What on earth are they saying about Barbara Hutton?

"Yes, this woman knows the Mdivanis . . . well I heard the man she was really going to marry was——"

Your lecturer on the couch is now explaining the community kitchen system." It is simply fascinating how it works! You can decide on your meats and vegetables——"

"Is that so? . . . Is that so?" Your ear is cocked to one side, your neck reaching out like that of a giraffe.

"Yes, she'd been mad about him for years . . . Well this friend of mine who was out in Hollywood last summer said everybody was talking about them——"

You give up again. Doggone this woman! Why didn't she stay on Scandinavia? "You'd be interested in the co-operative stores——"

"Is that so?. . . How interesting!" There, your ear is wig-waging again.

"No, they say he likes blondes . . . yes with wide hips . . . Yes, but Pola Negri . . . Well, but look where she is now . . . I heard his latest one——"

The voice trails off. The bombardment beside you continues. "You know one of the most interesting features of the co-operatives is the handling of the labor problem——"

"Is that so? . . . How amazing!" If only they would talk a little louder!

"King Carol . . . Tommy Manville . . . Well, that's what he got for marrying an 18-year-old girl . . . they say she looks ten years older with her hair up——"

You turn again to the dull barrage in your ear. "Now the living costs under the co-operatives——" "Oh, is that so?" Yes I have collected some very interesting data long that line——"

"——and then on their wedding day, he found out she was really a German spy!"

It is too much. Suddenly you are hunched forward, shouting eagerly across the room, "Did he go on with the wedding?"

Blood Test Now Offers Diagnosis Of Disease

Reveals Acids Present Shows Up Bacilli Cell Types Important

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Blood tests are made for various conditions. The blood is a highly complex sort of fluid, performs many functions and contains many kinds of bodies. Tests for these substances have attained a very high degree of efficiency, and diagnosis can be made with great certainty.

People speak with great certainty of the fact that their blood is acid and apparently are entirely unaware of the fact that the biochemist can tell exactly to a fraction how acid it is and what acids are present which causes the condition. The acidulous one would find in most instances that the blood was not acid at all. The blood is as nearly neutral as it is possible to be in this world, and it preserves its neutrality by many devious devices. If it should become very acid or very alkaline, a very serious condition follows.

Other tests of the blood are for immune bodies, as for the immune bodies of typhoid fever by the Widal test, and the Wasserman test, of which so much has been made lately. These tests are very ingenious. The Widal test, for instance, depends on the fact that after typhoid bacilli have lived in the body for a while, the blood develops what are known as agglutinous. The typhoid bacillus is motile and, under the microscope in a drop of water, darts all around with great rapidity. The agglutinins slow them down and clump them together. The microscopists can add a drop of a suspected typhoid patient's blood to a water drop full of typhoid bacilli and draw conclusions from whether they continue to dance around or stop and huddle together.

The commonest test for the blood, however, is for the formed elements—the red and white blood cells—to determine their number and appearance. The number of cells of either kind is remarkably constant in health among different people. We say a man looks plethoric, but the number of his red cells is probably the same as his emaciated neighbor.

A Woman's New York

MY POOR bedraggled spouse, whose name is Leonard Hall and who also writes pieces for the papers when he is not answering my telephone calls or going to fashion shows or escaping professional cocktail parties—which, alas, is seldom—has long been a very active partner in this modest enterprise, and is generally accepted as one of the leading living experts on that weird modern phenomenon, The New York Career Woman.

ALICE HUGHES

He has, in fact, written several very snippy essays on us for various magazines and newspapers, and while the shoe blistered when I put it on, I really had little or no grounds for a court suit, for breaking up the home or even for modest scuffling on their account. Often the charges were only too true. Moreover, after a decade of suffering in a home that is half residence, half office, half playground and half bargain basement sale, he is a specialist in keeping the peace in a house where loyalties may seen divided. His recipe for avoiding domestic brawls is the simplest and best in the world—he simply walks out the front door and remains away until the dust settles. Nothing can more infuriate a lady!

Not without a certain sinister charm, he has wormed his slimy way into the affections of some of my girl friends, including numerous big shots in practically all fields now infested by women. Once he complained about the superficiality of these affections to a famous and cunning French milliner on whom he has long had a playful crush—I hope. She drew herself up primly, and replied "Ah—but ve are all so fond of Aleeece!" It was the perfect answer. He howled.

With such an expert in the home, why doesn't he expert occasionally for you and me in these columns? Perhaps I'll prod and coax a bit. What think?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Second childhood now has me. No doubt about it. With a few leaves still on the trees, old Aunt Alice has already begun her skating exhibitions for the winter amid tremendous public apathy. The truth is that we have a wonderful new rink called "Gay Blades," thanks to the great upsurge in skating popularity recently. The place is a city block long and half as wide, and the ice is fine. Ah, what gayety this winter—and how many beautiful and famous carcasses will thump on that ice in the weeks to come!

Josette de Lima, one of our clothes designers, has just redone her apartment—and for a clothes horse in the entrance hall she has a real wooden horse from a Cony Island merry-go-round. Ducky idea—but not very hot for the coats of the early comers, with the garb of the tardy ones tossed on top. Ever think of that, Joe old kid?

Jean Thornton, lovely blonde wife of Willis Thornton, the Cleveland newspaperman, and my spouse's best pal, came to town the other day for a purely social visit. At my house, one evening, she played and sang some cute, clip little songs she had written for her own amusement. One of the hearers, enchanted, rushed to the phone and called Vincente Minnelli, the musical show producer, he, in turn, went mad over one of the numbers, called "Psychiatry." And now, after a little social call on pals, taffy-haired Jean will probably have a number in a big Broadway show!

Gretchen Green has just started a shop here with a name that slights nothing. She calls the joint "The Whole World and Co.," but what it really vends is a complete list of world-wide books on cooking, travel, mystery and biography. Just let the Whole World and Co., tell you, ladies!

Camera Art Self-Taught

JACK and Phyllis always have such interesting shots to show. But when you snap the same scenes they look dull as dishwater.

Probably your trouble is that you don't look at the scene with your camera's eye.

But your camera sees a huge telegraph pole as clearly as it sees the tree. The goldenrod it hardly sees at all, and the road in its eye is just a line cutting a slice off your picture. And what your camera sees is what you get on your film.

Make your camera see what you see. Snap from an angle that cuts off telegraph pole and road. To get an artistic effect, have your point of interest, the tree, a little to the left of center.

Keep the horizon line one-third from top or bottom—never let it cut your picture in half. To show how big your tree is, have someone sit beneath it.

As for pictures of your friends, what wicked tricks your camera can play! Slim-legged Jean appears as an advanced case of elephantiasis because her feet and legs are extended toward the camera—closer to its eye than the rest of her body.

Chuck's good-natured grin shows up as a blur of teeth—because you forget to set the focus scale correctly. Avoid such mistakes, take good pictures—both outdoors and indoors—by keeping in mind simple pointers on composition, focusing, lighting.

Cummingses Entertain For Mrs. Brosseau

Honor Mr. and Mrs. Baker at Dinner
Going to Pennsylvania Saturday
Leave for Connecticut Next Wednesday

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

ENTERTAINING AT their second dinner this week, the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings last evening had as their guest of honor Mrs. Grace Hall Brosseau, of Greenwich, Conn., who is in Washington for a brief visit. Mrs. Brosseau is widely known in the Capital, having spent much time here during the years when she was president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

HOPE R. MILLER.

On Monday evening honor guests at their dinner were Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, of San Francisco, who also are here for a brief stay. They have many friends in Washington, where they frequently visited during the years when Mr. Baker's brother, the late Raymond T. Baker, was director of the Mint.

The Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings will leave Saturday for Lancaster and York, Pa., and will return on Sunday. Then, next week they will be off for a longer trip. They will go to Atlantic City on Wednesday and then on to Connecticut after stopping off in New York to celebrate Mrs. Cummings' birthday on Friday, November 4. According to present plans, they will entertain a few friends at dinner that evening, taking them on later to see the play, "Oscar Wilde." The next day Mr. and Mrs. Cummings will go to Stamford, Conn., to attend the wedding of Miss Barbara Lockwood and Garrett Bunker. The former is the daughter of the Attorney General's former law partner, Judge Charles Davenport Lockwood.

AMONG THE MOST interesting visitors in the current Capital crop is Dr. Gonzalo R. Lafora, eminent Spanish psychiatrist, who arrived yesterday and is a guest at the Spanish Embassy. He is on his way to Mexico City, where he has been invited by the Mexican government to take a position as professor of psychiatry at the University of Mexico.

Dr. Lafora is no stranger in Washington. A number of years ago he was on the staff of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, and he still has a number of friends here, some of whom will be among the guests when the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios entertain at luncheon for him today.

Among guests invited to the luncheon are the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera; Dr. Adolph Meyer, of Johns Hopkins University; Dr. Winifred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeth's Hospital; Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilbert, Dr. and Mrs. William J. Mallory, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Freeman, Dr. William Hough, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas and members of the Spanish Embassy staff.

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: Brightest bit of chatter I've heard lately was part of the receiving line talk at the recent Dresden Choir concert. It seems that some months ago the German Ambassador had complaints from a neighbor about his cat.

"You've got to do something about him," she demanded. "He's frightening away the red birds."

"So," said Dr. Dieckhoff, repeating the incident over the teacups a few days later, "I told her I would build a high wall around my back yard. I certainly can't have a German cat annoying American cardinals."

Remembering the story the other night, witty Mrs. J. Fred Essary referred to it as Dr. Dieckhoff greeted her. "By the way, Mr. Ambassador," she asked, "are you still looking after the safety of American cardinals?"

"Oh, I gave the cat away," the envoy chuckled. "We're having enough trouble with cardinals in our own country!"

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: When Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Frank Andrews—he's administrator of the fair labor standards act, you know—arrived in Washington, they discovered that finding a house was twice as difficult as they expected. They are now located in Georgetown at 1416 Thirty-third street, where Senator and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy lived last winter . . . There are two daughters and a son in the Andrews household. The eldest, William Reed, is a freshman at the University of Pennsylvania. The girls, Jean Eleanore and Daphne Frank, are attending Western High School . . . Paul Sifon, deputy wage and hour law administrator, and his wife, Claire Sifton, deputy wage and hour law Twenty-ninth and R streets. Although both were formerly members of the press, they have devoted much time to playwriting. Their next play will have to do with the medical profession, younger practitioners particularly.

HERE AND THERE: Thomas Leiter will entertain at a dinner dance at the North Wales Club in Warrenton on November 12. Alexander Haas and his swing orchestra and Budapest Gipsy Ensemble, which held forth so successfully at Fontaine Fanhestock's debut party here last spring, will play . . . Justice James Clark McReynolds, who entertains more frequently than any other member of the Supreme Court, but always without fanfare, has a new collection of flower prints and china purchased in Europe, to show his guests. As fond of birds as he is of flowers, Justice McReynolds told friends at a recent dinner that he would like nothing better than to purchase a certain farm in Maryland and make it into a bird preserve . . . Miss Austine McDonnell, Virginia belle and beauty who recently pulled down a motion picture contract, has been widely publicized as the one selected for the role of Melanie in "Gone With the Wind." But the part she's really been reading for Hollywood big-wigs is Scarlett O'Hara's—as who hasn't? . . . Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith and her daughter, Mrs. Fred Bohen, who have been in New York for several days, will continue their stay at the St. Regis Hotel for another week . . . Mr. and Mrs. Alex Legare have returned from York Harbor, Me., where they have a summer place, and are at their home on Dumbarton avenue.

Society Hears Orchestra Led By Ormandy

Rakhmaninoff There First of Series
Most Boxes Occupied

A large and socially brilliant audience turned out last evening for the first of the winter's series of concerts by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy. The presence of the famed pianist and composer, Sergei Rakhmaninoff, added luster to the occasion.

Nearly every box was occupied. Miss Mabel Boardman, who always arrives well ahead of time, with her the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Victor Mallet, the latter wearing a long-sleeved velvet gown in a dark red shade particularly becoming to her blonde hair.

Blisses Accompanied By Envoy to Cuba

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss had with them in their box the United States Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. J. Butler Wright and their daughter, Miss Mary Wright, who are visiting them. Mrs. Bliss chose black lace for the occasion. Mrs. Wright topped off her smart black frock with a lei of brilliant red coq feathers, and Miss Wright was in a tailored evening gown of fuchsia.

The Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi occupied a box with the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith. Others present from the Diplomatic Corps were the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, who were with Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Caspar Miller. Mme. Peter wore a black gown topped with a spangled jacket in a pale yellow shade. The Finnish Minister and Mme. Jarnefelt occupied a box nearby, Mme. Jarnefelt wearing a black crepe gown with a brocaded jacket.

Applauding enthusiastically were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, the latter looking even younger than usual. Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, was with them.

Meet in Lobby For Intermission

Chatting in the lobby during the entre'acte were Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, in a clinging black crepe gown with a brief ermine jacket, and Mrs. Jasper DuBose and Mrs. Harold Tittman. Mrs. DuBose wore a silver fox wrap, as did Mrs. James Clement Dunn, who was with Mr. Dunn.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse were joined during intermission by the former's daughters, the Misses Marion and Elizabeth Shouse. Mrs. Shouse's jacket, of pale blue, over a black gown, were exactly matched in shade by her long gloves. The two sisters wore brocaded wraps over their dresses.

Particularly smart was Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, in a long wrap of brilliant green, very striking with her red hair. Others seen were Baron Paul Schell, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. Charles Bradley, Prince and Princess Ourusoff and Mrs. Austin Sullivan, who had the good fortune to be invited backstage afterward to meet Rakhmaninoff.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WASHINGTON DEBUTANTS, who are usually pretty dilatory about selecting dates for their coming-out parties, are better organized this year. There is a particular rush to reserve nights during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, when the all-important male will be home from school and college. Otherwise the pickings are apt to be slim, young men being notably a minus quantity in the Capital.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The ideal city in which to come out, as far as the stag line is concerned, is Boston, where Harvard affords a source of supply practically every night in the week. Then there are the numerous preparatory schools in the neighborhood, such as Andover and Milton, though as we recall a debutante usually feels vastly superior to anyone below college age.

SEVERAL important dinners are being planned for some of the more prominent of the season's debs, the dates of which we will announce a little later. One party which is being looked forward to is the oyster roast which Mrs. L. Corrin Strong will give on Sunday for Miss Ann Wilkinson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson. It will be held at the Strongs' home on Gibson Island.

POST-DEB Marian Kirk, who came out last year, will be home from Bryn Mawr for Thanksgiving festivities. Her mother, Mrs. Alan Kirk, plans to return around Christmas time from the West Coast, where Capt. Kirk is with the fleet. During their absence their daughter has been making her home with her grandmother, Mrs. Frederic L. Chapin.

Maisie Howard, popular debutante daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Howard, will spend this week-end with friends in Philadelphia.

Other week-end plans: Betty Hardie will go to Middleburg to stay with Mr. and Mrs. James Skinner and take in the horse show on Saturday. Mary Cootes and her parents, Col. and Mrs. Harry N. Cootes, will have Taggert Whipple, of Boston, as their guest. He was a member of the Harvard crew a few years ago.

MR. AND MRS. Douglas MacArthur arrive tomorrow from Paris, where the former is attached to the American Embassy. They are here on two months' leave and will stay with Mrs. MacArthur's sister, Mrs. Max Truitt. Both are daughters of Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley.

DOING A GOOD DEED was almost responsible for getting Mrs. David Karrick arrested the other evening. With Mrs. William Mackall and Anne Carter Greene, she is in charge of the Community Chest's exhibition house at Twelfth and G streets, and is responsible for seeing that all lights are thriftily turned out there when it is closed for the evening. Coming home from a dinner the other evening, she suddenly had a sinking feeling that she had forgotten her duty, so had her husband drive her to the house and was in the process of entering when the cop on the beat, under the impression that she was a housebreaker, arrived and demanded explanation.

ALICE BARRY, who is studying art this year, has landed her first job. She is decorating several rooms in the new house which Maj. and Mrs. David Barry are building . . . Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., has asked a few friends in for cocktails on Saturday as a farewell to Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver. They will leave November 1 to spend the winter in Southern Pines, N. C. . . . Mrs. Harry Parsons Cross, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, will return tomorrow to her home in Providence, R. I.

Bernice Safford Becomes Bride of John H. H. Pratt

Wearing the dress which her aunt, Mrs. H. N. Staats, had worn at her wedding, Miss Bernice Galpin Safford was married yesterday afternoon to John Hampton Helm Pratt.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. W. E. Safford and the late Dr. Safford, who was at one time vice governor of Guam. Mr. Pratt is the son of Col. and Mrs. H. B. Pratt, of San Diego, Calif.

Mrs. Safford's home at 3339 Mount Pleasant street was the scene of the wedding, which took place at 4:30. An altar was erected in front of a bay window in the drawing room, which had been decorated for the occasion with yellow chrysanthemums, dahlias and palms.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, the Rev. D. Wade Safford, of Kensington, Md. Her gown was of white lace, and her tulle veil was held with a cluster of gardenias in her hair. She carried a bouquet of these flowers and lilies of the valley.

Her only attendant was Miss Martha Joiner, who wore a turquoise blue gown and carried yellow chrysanthemums. Brunson McChesney, of Washington, was best man, and assisting in seating the guests were James Mann, Oliver Gasch and Philip Herrick, with whom Mr. Pratt has made his home in Washington, and Gerhardt Van Arkel and John Hightower.

After a wedding trip to New Hampshire, the couple will reside at 2331 Ashmead place. When she left for her wedding trip, the bride was wearing a teal blue dress and jacket of wool with hat to match.

Among out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Pratt, mother of the bridegroom; Mrs. John Rockwell, of Brookline, Mass., his grandmother, and an uncle, George Blackwell, also of Brookline. Others were Mrs. Knowlton Stofford, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. David MacDonald, of Pittsburgh; Fred Keeler, of Philadelphia, and Miss Virginia Nye, of Chillicothe, Ohio.

The bride is a graduate of Holton Arms and Wellesley College. Mr. Pratt attended Harvard University and Harvard Law School.

Last evening Justice and Mrs. Evatt were honor guests at the dinner of the Federal Bar Association at the Columbia Country Club, and were also feted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Daughters of 1812 Honor National Chief

Hold Reception for President and Her Staff
District Society Sponsors Event at Headquarters
Two 'Real Daughters' Among Capital Members

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The order of historical events was reversed yesterday when the National Society United States Daughters of 1812 held its annual board meeting preceding that of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, which will be held today. The D. A. R. board members and state regents met informally, however, at Memorial Continental Hall and gathered for a "Dutche Treat" dinner at the Mayflower in the evening.

The national headquarters of the Daughters of 1812, at 1461 Rhode Island avenue, was the scene of a large reception yesterday afternoon honoring the national president, Mrs. Arthur O'Neill, of Chicago, and her staff of officers. It was given by the D. C. Society, of which Mrs. Lane Schofield is president, and was marked by the presence of Mrs. Clara Louise Dowling, one of the three "real daughters" in the membership of the District organization.

Mrs. Schofield and Mrs. O'Neill were both in black and the latter carried an arm bouquet of flowers. Other national officers in the receiving line were Miss Minnie B. Wade, of New York City; Mrs. H. B. Diefenbach, of Akron, Ohio, and Mrs. Joseph M. Marsh, of Pittsburgh, Pa., all vice presidents; Mrs. Lloyd DeWitt Smith, of Detroit, secretary; Mrs. Maurice A. Blake, New Brunswick, N. J., treasurer; Mrs. Henry Warren, Hartford, Conn., historian; Mrs. T. S. Pilson, Houston, Tex., curator; Miss Katherine Wootten, of this city, librarian; Mrs. William A. Porter, Richmond, Va., corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Norris Harris, of Baltimore, registrar.

Mrs. Sol Lansburgh Chairman of Tea

Mrs. Sol Lansburgh, vice president of the District society, was in charge of arrangements for reception. Assisting at the tea table were Miss Anne Alexander, Mrs. William A. Kelsey, Mrs. Robert Mackinnon, Mrs. Albion W. Tuck, recording secretary, and Mrs. Theodore Tiller.

Officers of the local society who attended were Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, a past president and corresponding secretary; Miss Myrtle Schellenger, also a corresponding secretary; Mrs. Herbert M. Chaney, registrar; Mrs. Don I. Skidmore, treasurer; Mrs. Maurice A. Emerson, flag custodian.

Among the guests were Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State regent of the D. A. R.; Mrs. William J. Stone, national president of the Daughters of American Colonists; Mrs. Frank B. Steele, Mrs. Herbert E. Garlock, of Milwaukee; Mrs. Franklin Miller, of Albany, N. Y.; Mrs. John Franklin Little, past State regent of the Daughters of American Colonists; Mrs. Pedro Capo-Rodriguez, also a past State regent of that organization; Mrs. Percy Y. Schelly, past State president of the Daughters of 1812; Mrs. Ben Wych, past State president of North Carolina, and Mrs. Robert T. Armistead, honorary State president of Tennessee, and Mrs. Leo Kafehagen.

Ship Motif Used At D. A. R. Dinner

A ship motif was used last night at the "Dutch treat" dinner held by the national D. A. R. officers. It was significant both of the approach of Navy Day and the fact that the president general, Mrs. Henry M. Roberts, jr., lives in Annapolis. A large ship, bearing the name, U. S. S. D. A. R., decorated the center of the table and miniatures of it were at each place.

The dinner was arranged by Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general, and past State regent of the District. Immediately after it, the D. A. R. officers went to Constitution Hall to attend the Philadelphia Symphony concert.

Yesterday there were informal meetings of the board and of State regents and committee chairmen. It was decided to subscribe money to provide 75 books on the required reading list to the library of Lincoln Memorial University in Tennessee, one of the D. A. R. approved schools.

There was interest in the November issue of the National Historical Magazine of the Daughters of the American Revolution which came out yesterday. The editor, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, has just returned from Europe. Among the articles is one by Marie Lomas Bockoven, D. A. R. national chairman of press and publicity.

The national board will convene for its formal sessions this morning and this evening Mrs. Robert and her cabinet will be guests of honor at a reception at which the D. C. D. A. R. is entertaining at the Mayflower. Nearly 1,000 are expected to attend.

Voteless League's Luncheon Hears Ihlder on Housing

John Ihlder, Alley Dwelling Authority Administrator, yesterday addressed a luncheon meeting of the department of government and economic welfare of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters—the department of which Mrs. P W. Chappell is newly appointed chairman.

The meeting was held in Brookings Institution with 12 members present. Mrs. Ihlder presented a general discussion of the housing situation in Washington, not stressing the slums particularly.

The department will be represented by Mrs. Thomas Blaisdell, chairman of the sub-committee on wages, Mrs. Audley Smith and Mrs. Howard Vermilyea at the all-day meeting being held by the Women's Trade Union League on Sunday.

Ernest Lindley Will Speak Here On Roosevelt

Ernest W. Lindley, columnist of The Post and supporter of the New Deal, will be honor guest and speaker at a diner given by the Woman's National Democratic Club at its headquarters, 1526 New Hompshire avenue, tomorrow night.

Mr. Lindley, who has known President Roosevelt for many years, and who, in collaboration with Mrs. Lindley, has written and published a character study of him, will speak informally on "Roosevelt, the Man," giving personal impressions and sidelights of the President. Mrs. Edward Keating will preside and present the speaker.

Mrs. Blaisdell Hostess

Mrs. Thomas C. Blaisdell, 2810 P street will be hostess at a meeting of the legislative committee of the Washington League of Women Shoppers at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

It will be held at the national headquarters, 1828 I street.

Board members have been saddened by news of he death last week of Mrs. Willard Louis Caler, of Miami, Fla., national historian. She had been deeply interested in the organization's genealogical research and was prominent in all its patriotic activities. From 1932 to 1935 she served as State president of the Florida chapter.

MRS. ROSS COLLINS, wife of Representative Collins from Mississippi, will enertain the members of the Washington Alliance of Delta Delta Delta at her apartment in the Mayflower Hotel tonight.

Mrs. Howard Eales, a former president of the alliance and one of the career girls of Delta Delta Delta, whose "Roving Library" is well known, and one of the most successful of its kind in the United States, will give a comprehensive review of the new fall books. She will stress particularly the following books by authors now living in Washington: "First the Blade," by May Merrill Miller; "This Is Democracy," by Marquis Childs; "Submarine, the Autobiography of Simon Lake as Told to Herbert Corey," by Herbert Corey; "Woman on Horseback," by William E. Barrett; "The Coming Struggle for Latin America," by Carleton Beals, and "Parts Unknown," by Francis Parkinson Keyes.

Hostesses will be Jean Carpenter, Leora Sanford, Alice Walker, Virginia Dalker, Ruth Adair and Beth Adams and Mrs. George Lovell, Mrs. George O. Bailey, Mrs. Mason F. Ball and Mrs. Clifford G. Cornwell.

ORIGINAL STORIES and poems will be read by members of the Writers League of Washington at its meeting tomorrow night at Thomson School. Mrs. Elizabeth Aldrich, the president, at the last meeting read her article, "The King Has a Birthday," which was published in the California Monthly, and Anna Priestly recited her poem which recently appeared in the Cathedral Age.

Others on the program include Margaret Jean Bailey, who will present an original story; Lena Sylvester and Corrine Hay, feature articles, and Charles Cottingham, an original poem.

2 Large Parties Are Given

Two large benefit card parties were given yesterday afternoon, the one by the League of Republican Women at the Sulgrave Club, and the other by the District of Columbia Branch of the Kenmore Association at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mme. Cantacuzene, who recently resigned as president of the League of Republican Women, was hostess to its members at the tea which followed its card party yesterday. She has just returned from an extended visit in Europe. She and Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, first vice president, welcomed the guests as they arrived.

The card party for which there were 60 tables, was in charge of Mrs. Warren J. Haines, who had serving with her, Mrs. Maurice Thatcher, Mrs. James E. Barnes, Miss Daisy Prentice and Mrs. Robert H. McNeill Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of Senator Davis, which was appointed with an oval bouquet of yellow and rust chrysanthemums as a centerpiece.

Mrs. Pattison French is regent of the District of Columbia Branch of the Kenmore Association, which sponsored the party at the Shoreham. There were 50 tables, and proceeds of the bridge will go to the Kenmore Endowment Fund. Mrs. Joseph Wall was in charge of the affair, assisted by Miss Bertha Chinn, as treasurer. Mrs. James Gaven Field had charge of the candy table and Mrs. Robert D. Cummin, assisted by Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, of the table at which dolls, hearth brooms, penwipers and cedar ice buckets, made by the mountain people near Fredericksburg, Va., were sold.

Prizes were packages of gingerbread and Mary Washington's recipe for it. Mrs. Stewart Walker was chairman of prizes.

Bedtime Stories

Sue Sees Some Teamwork

When two combine each doth possess
A chance that's doubled for success. —REDDY FOX.

The Old Naturalist had told Tommy, Sue and Sammy a wonderful story of co-operation that he had witnessed among ants, a story that was true in every detail. "Co-operation," he added, "is not confined to insects such as bees and ants and wasps that live in communities. You will find it among both birds and animals. Among birds you will often see father and mother working together. They co-operate in building the nest and later in feeding and caring for the young. Beavers co-operate in building their wonderful dams and houses and in digging canals and cutting a winter food supply."

Sue was thinking of this as she started out for a walk. "I wonder," thought she, "if other animals work together. I can't seem to think of any, but I suppose there are some."

She went down the Long Lane to Farmer Brown's cornfield. Behind a shock of corn she peered out across the Green Meadows. She had learned that she could always see more of the Little People of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest by keeping unseen herself. At first she saw no one. She was just about to step out from behind that shock when a spot of red over by the dear Old Briar patch caught her attention. At first she thought nothing about it. Then it moved. Anyway she thought it did. She watched it. Presently it moved again ever so little.

"It is Reddy Fox," thought Sue with a little thrill of excitment. "What can he be doing out there in broad daylight I wonder."

There was no more movement. Evidently Reddy was lying down in the grass. She could hardly see him. After a while she let her gaze wander away from that little spot of Red over the Green Meadows toward the Old Pasture. There was something red over there. Sue rubbed her eyes to make sure that they were not fooling her. They were not. "I do believe that is another Fox!" she exclaimed under her breath. A few seconds later there wasn't a doubt about it. Mrs. Reddy, for that is who it was stood up on her hind feet for just a second for a quick look out toward the middle of the Green Meadows. Then she dropped down and, crouching low, began to move quickly. She wasn't moving straight across the Green Meadows, but was circling around. Again she raised up for a quick look.

"It is Reddy Fox," thought Sue with a little thrill of excitement

Sue glanced over to Reddy. She was just in time to him also raise up and drop back quickly. He was still in the same place over near the dear Old Briar patch.

"Now what are they doing?" wondered Sue.

Again Mrs. Reddy stopped long enough to stand up for a quick look. She was near enough for Sue to see her clearly. There was a look of eagerness and satisfaction on her sharp face. It was clear that she was satisfied with whatever she saw. What could it be? Sue looked carefully where Mrs. Reddy had seemed to be looking and suddenly she gave a little gasp of dismay. A small spot of brown she hadn't noticed before had moved with a funny bobbing motion. Then a familiar form had sat up straight.

"Peter Rabbit!" cried Sue under her breath and suddenly everything was clear to her. Reddy or Mrs. Reddy had discovered Peter foolishly out there far from the safety of the dear Old Briar patch. They knew that it was doubtful if one alone could creep near enough without being seen to catch him before he could reach the dear Old Briar patch. So they had planned some team work. They were co-operating. Reddy had gone around the dear Old Briar patch until he could, unseen by Peter, creep out until he was between Peter and home. Now he was lying in wait. Mrs. Reddy was around to a place where Peter was between them. When Peter should see her he naturally would start for the dear Old Briar patch, lipperty-lipperty-lip, as fast as he could go and run right into the jaws of Reddy.

Duty to Support Government, Says Wade Ellis

Stressing the fact that "it is not the duty of the Government to support the people, but the duty of the people to support the Government," Wade H. Ellis, prominent attorney, spoke yesterday on "The Constitution" in a radio broadcast sponsored by the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution.

Following a brief review of the forming of the Constitution and the American standards it embodies, he asailed as a dangerous and un-American half-truth the doctrine that the world owes every man a living. Nothing can so destroy self-respect and all those qualities which make for peace and progress as to teach mankind that we are entitled to all the needs and luxuries of life without doing anything to deserve them." He expressed confidence the difficulties of the country would adjust themselves, and cited the revival in business and employment as proof.

Mr. Ellis was introduced by Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, chairman of radio for the District D.A.R.

Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, is leaving today for Michigan where she will participate in the campaign to elect Democratic Congressmen and to re-elect Gov. Frank Murphy. On November 3, she will speak at a State-wide luncheon meeting in Springfield, Ill., and that evening will be heard at a rally at Indianapolis, Ind.

Mrs. May Thompson Evans, assistant director of the women's division, will address a women's rally in Pittsburgh Saturday.

Among other guests were Mrs. Andrews and Paul Sifton, deputy administrator of the wage and hour law, and Mrs. Sifton.

EASY PARKING SPACE

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

COMES THE staggering news that 10.71 per cent of Treasury Local Union 262, N. F. F. E., have opposed the organization making the McCormick bill—providing for a 5-day week—one of its major legislative objectives in the next Congress. These tidings were brought by Publicity Representative Hugh W. Fisher, who said the explanation should come from Elmer C. Hooper, the financial secretary and treasurer. Hooper said the 10.71 per cent of the membership evidently thought that "the time is inappropriate" to push the 5-day week. "But they want it generally," he said, "as is shown by the 89.28 per cent who voted to push the bill.

Scarlet on the escutcheon: A client comes to make complaint the great Postoffice Department won't want read into its record. He affirms that on Friday afternoon he mailed two football tickets, special delivery, to a relative in Baltimore. The game was played on Sunday and the tickets were valid only for this game. The tickets reached the relative on Monday morning: of course on Sunday it was a matter of no tickee no gamee.

And there is no redress: claims come only on registered mail, said officials, promising an investigation of the incident.

OH, YEZ! Oh, yez—here is a communication concerning the proposed court of appeals for Government workers:

"Principally, the main appeal should be in reference to ousters, to employes who consider themselves unjustly fired. The Chief Executive cannot help him; the Commission cannot help him. Congress is the only agency which can. How? By amending Section 6, of the Act of August 24, 1912, which provides that in the case of oustings only the officer making the removal may grant examination of witnesses or a trial." The correspondent here was Harry G. Ritner, and we pass on to another communication.

THIS ONE from Arthur Talmage Abernethy, of Burke County, N. C., who gives himself the titles of "Sage of Rutherford College," "North Carolina Ambassador of Sunshine—Governor's appointment" and "Honorary Life Citizen of Charlotte, Hickory, Valdese and Asheville." He writes, in part:

"Many years ago there was an Iowa lady in the service of the United States Postoffice, Third Assistant Postmaster General's Office, by the name of Miss Georgia Jeffrey, who resided at various times on Iowa circle and at Grant place in Washington. This estimable young woman, I understand, later married—so I was informed—a Russian prince, relative of the then reigning Czar, and went to Russia to live. I was told that the name of the Russian nobleman was Prince Gagarin, if my memory serves me correctly. It is my desire to ascertain if this estimable former Miss Georgia Jeffrey is still living, and if so where she may be reached with some information from an old-time friend which will be of great value and interest to her." He asks the co-operation of readers in finding Miss Jeffrey.

Twenty-four new faces are seen in ICC corridors. The recent appointments are: Stephen M. Malaszefski, New Jersey; Walter L. Behrens, New York City; Cecil H. Hernandez, Florida; John F. Hanley, New York—to Admiinstration; William C. Rinsdale, New York—to Locomotive Inspection; Mildred L. Fry, D. C.; John T. McHale, D. C.; Oscar H. Brinkman, Wisconsin; Robert E. Wood, Pennsylvania; William M. Hughes, New York; Raymond G. Seeds, Pennsylvania, Else M. Pfeuffer, Pennsylvania; Dorothy N. McWhirter, Texas; Mildred K. Sullivan, Rhode Island; Louis I. Dailer, Mississippi; Ida S. Greenbaum, New York, and Adelaide Walton, North Carolina—to Motor Carriers; Louis Burrell, Indiana—to Safety; Ruth T. Bennett, Missouri, to Secretary's Office; Matthew Paolo, New York; Allen E. Meltzer, New York, and Ida S. Kessner, New York—to Statistics; Stanley B. Dziekowski, Chicago, and Henry D. Fostel, New York—to Traffic.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

"Driver, the Cafe Caprice!" These words will rattle constantly into taxi drivers' ears tomorrow evening, educate them on the way to the town's newest night spot. For on Thursday the Caprice will flash into the public view for the first time in all its eye-filling glory of gold mirrors and stainless steel, ivory silks, Vienna carmine panels and Parisian murals.

Radio star and song writer Vee Lawnhurst will sing and play piano. Her program will include some of her own compositions. More melody will be offered by the Three Idlers, recently starred at Manhattan's Versailles and St. Moritz.

Caprice is ultra-modern—from the etched glass panels that separate its uniquely shaped booths to its rather giddy murals executed by the notable French artist, Andre Duranceau. Truly it's pretty as a picture—we mean prettier.

VEE LAWNHURST, radio nightingale who will sing in the new Cafe Caprice of the Roger Smith Hotel

Shar-Zad Stereopticon: Capt. and Mrs. Ray Middleton from down Middleburg, Va., way; little Regina McKeever, deb of last year, very taking in a deep green outfit; Nelda May Acker, pretty and witty daughter of Mrs. Edna Howard Acker, notable attorney, especially concerned in Indian affairs; Mrs. C. K. Gibson, wearing a cute skyscraper bonnet right from Paree; blonde Betty Pierce, who has the original fad of having everyone at a party autograph match covers, the big idea being that Betty is going to cover a card table or a wall or maybe a house with said match covers some day; Sande Williams thoughtfully coming over to ask about request numbers; Sammy Sanders turning loose "Bahama Mamma" in Bahama style, but using reasonable discretion on the lyrics.

There'll probably be a "Gay Nineties" foursome in the Shoreham Blue Room before the week is out. With Houston and Harden doing laughable "Florodora" variations and Shayne and Armstrong popping out with cat-a-s dance skits to "Pop Goes the Weasel" and "Take Me Out to the Ball Game"—the acute Shoreham management is toying with the thought that the quartet should team up a dance-and-song reminiscence of bustle days. The cause of mirth is also well served by Lew Hoffman, who juggles silk hats and cigar boxes in slow motion, smokes a cheroot that flares like a torch. P. S. Myrus says that the Pittsburgh-Fordham game will result in a score of 13-7 in favor of Pitt. Let's check.

King Cole Special: Evelyn Knight will sing "Gue, Gue, So Lin Gale" for the first time tonight in the K. Cole Room. We gather that it's a French lullaby soothing baby to sleep with a little story about crocodiles (snappy slumber song?). Those who've been enjoying the constant improvement in Eve Knight's style should be interested to know that Evie is constantly studying diction and phrasing under the town's best teachers.

Mayfair's psychic expert, the Countess de Bournet, generously celebrated her own birthday by tossing a big and happy dinner party on Sunday. Her mother, Baroness de Bournet, came down from Pennsylvania for the event. After the cake was cut there were songs by Mayfair's Jack Campbell, also Elizabeth Calverton and Robert Frederick Freund, whom you've probably heard at the Capitol Theater.

A touchdown is scored by every act in Lotus' new "College Capers" revue. Queen of the "Capers" is Corinne, 250 pounds of beauty, brains and brawn, who waltzes like a feather, tosses Partner Claude around with the greatest of ease, and finally pops up in the football finale as the Vassar delegate. Don Traynor plays one, two and three trumpets. By week's end he'll probably be playing six trumpets. Buddy Shaner sings "Mexicali Rose" and a flock of college songs.

Hi Hat's ever-alert Oscar has four bottles of home brew hoarded from pre-repeal days. He's finally decided to give them to the Three M's because of the way they regularly break his heart with Tyrolean yodeling and singing "Vienna, City of Dreams."

Attention, Epicures!

Flaming crepes Suzette are a midnight specialty in the Raleigh Pall Mall Room. Take your own fire extinguisher.

Prof. Pango, Bamboo Gardens' peerer-into-the-future, is a devoted reader of Pearl Buck books and says that they are the only writings of an Occidental author that encompass the true feeling of modern China.

Mighty pleasant to the ears:

"You Look Good to Me," new Walter Donaldson song being played by Johnny Slaughter's Metronome Room orchestra. Also that trick arrangement of "Ol' Man Mose" being warbled by Ernestine Gardner.

Milton Davis and the Rainbow Room boys going reminiscent with the old but sweet "Little Birch Canoe."

"September Song" from "Knickerbocker Holiday" as played superlatively by the Harold Veo directed orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge.

Too Ill to Work, Man Hangs Self From Flagpole

Told by physicians he must give up work because of an ailing heart, Frank W. Richardson, 58, former Washington jewelry salesman, rode more than 40 miles and hanged himself from a flagpole at Bay Ridge, Md., police of Anne Arundel County reported last night.

The body was found by a bank watchman hanging from the pole in a deserted section of the shore resort. All identifying marks had been removed from the man's clothing and his name was not learned for several hours.

"I'm going down to Bay Ridge and kill myself."

When he identified the body yesterday, Isaac Richardson said he had not thought his brother was serious.

The dead man lived here at 1115 Twelfth street northwest.

Magistrate Joseph M. Armstrong of Annapolis ordered an inquest this morning.

Goodwill Exhibit Aids Alexandria Tour

Interest will be lent to the Historic Homes Tour in Alexandria Friday and Saturday afternoons by exhibits from the Goodwill Industries of Washington.

One of the rarest will be a damask table cover made by hand with an inscription in the corner reading, "Fancy coverlet, woven by G. Heilbronn, Lancaster, Ohio, 1852." A brooch, earrings and old spectacles will also be shown. These objects have been received in Goodwill bags and are being kept to form nucleus of a museum.

Do you order Dinner well?

. . . are you the Man who Cares?

GIVE Frank and Ed the same menu in the same cafe with the same price to spend.

Frank will order with discrimination, and he'll get a delicious meal. Ed will order in a hurry, and he'll get a dull repast.

Carstairs is notably a whiskey for men like Frank. Light in body, rich in flavor, it has the character good judges demand. A blend of several great whiskies, it is a distinguished blend. And it is your blend if you are "the Man who Cares".

The Highball of Character

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Contrary to legend, the Justices of the highest court do not live on milk and lettuce. Their luncheon checks run from 50 to 75 cents, which is fairly substantial at the popular-priced Supreme Court restaurant. For the work they have to do this year they need meat and potatoes occasionally.

Justice Butler . . . raconteur

There's a rumor that a spinach sandwich is the piece de resistance, the mainstay of Chief Justice Hughes' noonday gorge, but I set that down as folklore . . . . Whatever his diet—it's brought from his house each day in a basket—he ought to embody it in one of his opinions, for he's a miracle of fitness.

• • • •

Renowned for a certain crustiness, and famed as a woman-shy bachelor, Justice McReynolds once electrified on-lookers in the restaurant by falling for a little girl who was eating with her grandmother. Eye-witnesses swear that he made funny faces at her and climaxed it all by giving her a dollar. Maybe he reasoned it was worth only 50c gold.

"—as justices used to eat"

Apparently Justice Hugo Black has successfully passed his period of probation and is accepted by the other patriarchs as one of them, like a strange new boy in a private school. He sits next to fastidious Justice Harlan Stone, by the new seating arrangement, and after all propinquity propinks.

• • • •

He and Justice Reed are the heartiest eaters on this legal Mount Everest, and they are also the most frequent patrons of the restaurant downstairs. When they come down they usually get in line with the hot-polloi and carry their trays, choosing their chow by eye and nose, as they march past the food counter.

• • • •

Once or twice a month Justices McReynolds, Stone and Butler patronize the restaurant in person; but they usually sit down at tables and are waited on . . . Mr. McReynolds never carries a tray. Black is a pushover for southern dishes—pecan pie, black-eyed peas and onion soup—and whatever else he eats, he always has hearts of lettuce and prune juice. . . He isn't eating quite so heartily this term as last; ole judiciary's got him.

• • • •

A case of vichy water is kept on hand for Butler, and Stone is a buttermilk addict. Four days out of five the Justices eat together in their sacred dining room, complete with a little kitchen which would bring coos from any bride, where their food is warmed.

On these days Butler, Reed, Black, Brandeis and Roberts have trays sent up from the restaurant.

Sometimes these Justices order from the menu, in the half hour they allow themselves for lunch; sometimes their messengers make the selections . . . The Chief Justice never has a tray sent up; his food comes from home. Neither Hughes nor Brandeis has ever been in the restaurant.

McReynolds and Stone never have trays; maybe they carry their lunches in their brief cases like British civil servants.

All of them like salads and pies . . . . Sutherland, who retired last year, still has an office in the court building, and eats there occasionally when he's in town . . . Once Alice Longworth trooped in with a merry party on a lark. . . . The Justices are ideal gourmets; never a complaint out of them; but the food, I can testify, is excellent. . .

• • • •

Occasionally colored lawyers cause a stir by trooping in for a snack, though there is a separate dining room for Negroes . . . Once a Negro was refused service and complained to the Court Marshal. The appeal went clear up to the Chief Justice, who ruled that the inscription over the main door, "Justice for All," applied. Fortunately, Negroes have the good taste not to press the point.

• • • •

A non-smoker, Justice McReynolds once frowned away the tall stone cigar repositories in his section of corridor. . . . Butler is the great raconteur of the court; he loves to tell stories of his days as a young lawyer for Jim Hill, the railroad builder, in Minnesota.

Not long ago an old lady was being shown the empty court room. She dropped to her knees and prayed for the Supreme Court of the USA.

Jobs for 2,300 Here Assured In PWA Work

All Types Included Sewer Building Begun Will Employ 1,000

Employment for more than 2,300 men was assured yesterday by District officials under the vast Public Works improvement program for this city.

Men in all types of construction, architectural, and building work will be employed for the 11 projects financed with $18,150,000 in PWA funds.

More than 1,000 men will go to work by the first of the year on the $5,377,000 sewer program, formal contracts of which were signed yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Sewer Project Begun

The sewer project began last Saturday on the Klingle Valley divorcement sewer. It was explained the entire program must be completed by June 22, 1940.

The Municipal Center development, which will begin by January 1, will provide work for 460 men. In all cases, it was explained the number of men to be employed was "an estimate."

Public Works Administrator Ickes allotted the District $5,700,000, the largest single item in the entire program, for the construction of the Municipal Center. Under the terms of the contract the work must be completed by June 30, 1940.

Jail Program

Work on the District Jail expansion program will begin January 1, supplying employment for 157 men. The District received a loan and grant for $1,600,000 for this work. The project must be completed by June 30, 1940.

One hundred and thirty-eight men will work on the construction of the new Municipal Court which will be erected on Judiciary Square. The new court building, which will be identical with the new Police Court Building, will cost $1,500,000. Work will begin on this project Friday and must be completed by April 28, 1940.

The public school improvement program will require the work of 175 men for 18 months. Work on this $1,038,000 project will begin by December 24.

Gallinger Improvements

The Juvenile Court, which will also be erected on Judiciary Square, will put 66 men to work. A total of $550,000 has been alloted for this work by PWA. Work on this project will begin Friday and must be finished by January 27, 1940.

Gallinger Hospital improvements, including two new ward buildings, a nurses' home and a District morgue, will employ 144 men. Work on one of the ward buildings, to cost $750,000, will begin Friday. The building will be completed by June 28, 1940. The other ward building, the nurses' home and the morgue, will cost $575,000. Work will begin January 1 and continue for 18 months.

Some 102 men will work on the water and sewer improvements at the Lorton Reformatory. Secretary Ickes approved a loan and grant of $300,000 for this work. The work will begin January 1 and last a year. About 70 men will be employed on the construction of the hospital and administration building at the District Training School for Feeble-Minded at Laurel, Md. The fire alarm system will employ 52 men in its construction work.

Key Bridge Span Bids Asked by Roads Bureau

Bids for the construction of a new south span of Key Bridge and reconstruction of the Rosslyn plaza were asked yesterday by the Bureau of Public Roads. Bids must be in the bureau office, Seventeenth and F streets northwest, by 11 a. m., November 22.

German Coins Show Ancient Love of Sword

Dealer Cites Examples Points to Saxon King His Blade Prominent

"Maybe you think I just don't like Germans," Charley Kohen, coin and stamp expert, said yesterday as he fondled thousands of envelopes of rare coins he had just received.

"But you have proof right here in their coins that as long ago as the sixteenth century and before they made no bones about letting it be known they ruled by the sword."

At that moment Charley, who was installed last night as commander of the Cooley-McCullough Post, American Legion, held up a silver coin slightly larger than an American dollar, bearing the likenes of King Mauricius of Saxony.

"See how prominent his sward is?" he asked showing the coin, dated 1348. "All old German coins showed their kings with swords," he added, digging out another, dated 1595.

Charley gave the impression that you learn many things in the coin, stamp and autograph business. At that moment the telephone rang in his small shop at 716 Seventeenth street northwest.

"Yes," he said, "I have just one left. I'll hold it for you."

And in a few moments a man rushed in to purchase for 25 cents a British sixpence piece. "It's for my niece. She's to be married in Maine and they couldn't find one up that way."

"Be sure to tell her to put it in the right shoe," Charley called as the man rushed out. The right shoe, explained Charley, is the correct one in which to place a sixpence before marriage. If the bride puts the coin in her left shoe, the couple will fight before end of the night, according to old beliefs.

"You can believe it or not," Charley added, "but an English couple postponed their wedding recently for three weeks until I could get one of the coins for them. I had to wire all over the country before I could get one."

Woman Forger Repaying $494; Gets Probation

Justice Gordon granted probation yesterday to Mrs. Claire E. Fraser, 42, who has begun to pay back the $494 she pleaded guilty to obtaining by forging Government checks. Fines of $1,000 and ten sentences to one to three years against her were suspended during her good behavior.

Attorney Milton Kronheim, jr., told the court she began forging the checks in 1935.

Justice Gordon sentenced to 12 to 18 months Attorney Irving Lichtenberg, 33, of 3005 Ordway street northwest, who pleaded guilty to forging a $2,600 Government check and embezzling $1,480.

Rats Move Meat Meant for Them, Poison 2 Dogs

Rats which have become "death messengers" caused the death of two dogs in the past two weeks, both the property of Mrs. Katherine Fagiolo, rear 118 C street northwest, police believed yesterday.

Mrs. Fagiolo appeared at police headquarters complaining that her pet 1-year-old German police dog had just succumbed, from eating poison meat.

Police after investigating said a neighbor was putting out poison meat in her back yard to kill rats, which instead were carrying the meat to other yards. This will be reported to the Humane Society today, police said.

Neighbors Plead for Liberty For Escaped D. C. Convict

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 25.—Residents of Amberg Township, declaring Dewey L. Roush had been a model citizen more than ten years, circulated a petition today asking his release by county authorities who are holding him for removal to the District of Columbia for completion of a sentence for automobile theft.

Officers said Roush escaped from the reformatory at Lorton, Va., after serving 20 months of a 3-year sentence, imposed November 25, 1925.

The petition said Roush had a small farm and worked part time on WPA, supporting his wife and aged mother.

Found Through Bonus

A member of the staff of the District Jail's identification bureau, checking through records transferrred from Lorton three weeks ago, discovered Roush had cashed part of a bonus certificate in the Wisconsin town, it was learned here last night.

L. J. Green, who made the discovery, forwarded Roush's picture to Wisconsin authorities, who notified Washington of the man's arrest.

Roush escaped from Lorton March 31, 1926, leaving his bonus certificate behind. When Congress decided to cash veterans' bonuses, Roush applied for a duplicate certificate. By checking correspondence records in the jail and Treasury Department, Greene discovered the convict's whereabouts.

Child Care Stressed by Roosevelt

He Cites 'Challenge' Doctors Meet Here Gen. Hines Speaks Urges Veterans' Aid

The "grave problem of the crippled child and the defective child" was emphasized by President Roosevelt in a letter read last night at the annual banquet of the Academy of Physical Medicine at the Willard Hotel.

The question is so important, wrote the President, that "it should serve as a challenge to every man in medicine today to exert his best efforts in helping to put these unfortunate ones on the high road to a useful and happy life."

President Roosevelt's letter, read by Rear Admiral Perceval S. Rossiter, surgeon-general of the Navy, continued: "If this Nation of ours is to continue great, our future citizens must be healthy in mind and body. What better means can be found to bring this about than to look to the health of our children? Your organization, because of its specialization, should play a great part in aiding and improving the welfare of the children of America."

Care for Veterans Urged

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, chief of the United States Veterans' Administration, told the assembled physicians and surgeons that full hospitalization and rehabilitation of veterans was worthwhile, "whether or not it leads in the direction of State medicine."

The Veterans' Administration policy is "costly," Hines admitted, "but not so costly as pensions." He said "it may avoid a most costly pension, one surpassing any amount heretofore expended."

Hines warned that "we are now back on the same old road of Government compensation and pension. How far we go depends on the extent to which we satisfy the men by hospitalization and employment. A true soldier would much rather be employed and retain his self-respect than obtain pension or compensation which, after all, is not sufficient to maintain himself or his family.

Arm of National Defense

The Veterans Administration is "an arm of the national defense," said Hines. "It has a very material bearing on citizenship, because those nations which have not fairly treated their soldiers have disapepared."

Dr. Rolland A. Case, of Cleveland, president of the academy, asked Armiral Rossiter to assure President Roosevelt that "'we will certainly do everything in our power to carry out his recommendations." Dr. Frank H. Krusen, of the Mayo Clinic, was toastmaster.

Earlier in the day, Dr. Henry Laurens, professor of physiology at Tulane University, told a session of the academy's sixteenth annual meeting that persons who have exposed themselves greatly to ultraviolet rays showed the highest percentage of skin cancer. Over-indulgence in sunlight may also lead to nervousness, insomnia and other systemic complications, he said.

Gastroscope Discussed

Heartening advances in the use of the gastroscope to view and diagnose stomach cancers, ulcers and other pathological conditions were reported by Drs. William A. Swalm and Lester M. Morrison, both of Temple University. The tube-like instrument enables the physician to observe diseased stomach tissue with the naked eye and make regular check-ups on the progress of healing.

Dr. R. L. Sexton, of Washington, said the actual pathology of syphilis of the stomach was not determined until the use of the gastroscope.

Dr. Chevalier Lawrence Jackson, of Temple University Medical School, talked on bronchoscopy in the treatment of tuberculosis of the trachea and bronchial tubes.

The brain as a broadcasting station was the subject of Dr. Hudson Hoakland, consultant in neurophysiology at the Massachusetts State Hospital at Worcester. In a paper prepared by Drs. D. Ewen Cameron, Morton A. Rubin and himself, Dr. Hoagland described a series of experiments to determine how emotional stimuli, such as disturbing questions, influence the frequency of electrical brain waves.

Allen to Direct Paralysis Campaign

President Roosevelt named former District Commissioner George E. Allen director of national organization for the 1939 "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign, as the annual drive was formally launched yesterday. The campaign will terminate on January 30, the President's fifty-seventh birthday.

Besides Allen, the following Washingtonians were appointed: Robert V. Fleming, Neville Miller, John J. Pelley and William Green. Keith Morgan, of New York, is chairman, and Joseph M. Schenck, of Los Angeles, vice chairman.

Miss Thompson Will Speak At Chest Rally

Columnist Is Authority Knows Social Conditions Meeting November 7

Dorothy Thompson, Washington Post columnist and radio commentator, will speak at a mass meeting opening the eleventh annual campaign of the Greater Washington Community Chest in Constitution Hall November 7.

Announcement that Miss Thompson, who is the wife of Sinclair Lewis, novelist, will make a special trip to the Capital to help in the annual appeal for funds was made yesterday by William J. Flather, jr., general campaign chairman, and Joseph D. Kaufman, mass meeting chairman.

Miss Thompson, the announcement pointed out, is in "close personal contact with political and social leaders all over Europe as well as in the United States and speaks from first-hand knowledge of national and international social conditions."

Chevy Chase Jr. College Girls Don't Give a Whoop for Hoops

Survey Shows 70 Pct. Turns Thumbs Down 'I'd Look Like a Cow,' One Declares Minority Blames Others With Laziness

The girls at Chevy Chase Junior College don't give a whoop for hoop skirts and they don't care who knows it—at least, that's how 70 per cent of them felt yesterday.

Recent advance of the hoop skirt into the halls of the school brought a survey of opinion which ended with 70 per cent turning 'thumbs down" on the idea.

Although today's hoops are a bit more simplified than the skirts of grandmother's day, when the bustle made things difficult in elevators, the Chevy Chase girls still think they are outmoded.

On the other hand, the minority is an outspoken 30 per cent and is just perfectly furious about the whole thing. They blame laziness for the attitude of the majority.

"Hoops have their place in the drawing room or portrait, but in the mad rush of the college life, hoops are definitely asking for embarrassment and calamity," Layte Thomas Wheeler, editor of The Chaser, school paper, and president of Social Service, asserted.

Trouble is that when the hoop-skirt clad queen steps in a car there's likely to be some mistake about the place of the hoop, which usually catches on some protruding object.

"They just aren't suited to the fast pace of today and don't suit dances at all," Gere Green and Diana Lloyd declared.

"Besides I think boys like the slinky type," Miss Green added.

Carol Rachlin, Mary Cliff La Force and Rosalie Gosselyn, dissenters, said hoop skirts "are just precious" and that's about all there is to it.

Frank Lloyd Wright Looks on U. S. Buildings, Williamsburg, Housing, and Finds Them Bad

By James D. Secrest.

Governmental low-cost housing projects and Washington's newer Federal buildings were targets of the wit of Frank Lloyd Wright, architect, yesterday following a fling at the Rockefeller restoration of colonial Williamsburg.

Coming to Washington to address the Federal Architects Association, the white-haired, ruddy-faced dean of American architects defended his attack on colonial architecture as he explained the "organic" architecture which he espouses.

Describing colonial architecture as "the dwindling to an end of the search for the elegant," he asserted that it is as much out of place in the life of today as would be knee breeches.

Colonial architecture was brought to this country from England, he said, and England stole it from France, "having no culture of its own."

Washington's Federal buildings, on which the Government has spent millions of dollars, were deplored as outstanding examples of "grandomania" and "symbols of authority out of a pontifical past."

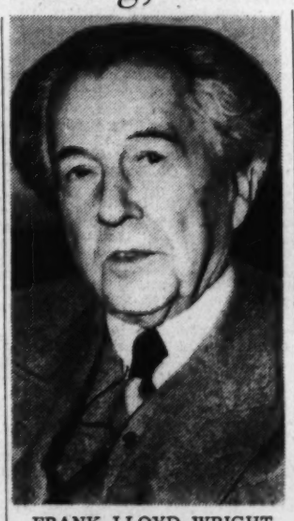
Conventional low-cost housing and governmental subsidiaries were criticized by the exponent of naturalness and utilitarian beauty as too expensive for the working man without making him a "Government beneficiary."

"It's bad enough having poverty with us always," he said, "without making it an institution."

Asked how he would meet the problem of providing modern housing for the low-income groups, Wright said:

"I'd take the factory to the home. I'd squeeze the water out of many of the insurances and profits of building."

Yet he would not standardize the low-cost dwellings to a point of monotony, he explained, but would give the workman a choice of homes through the benefits of mass production.



FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT

"Organic" architecture was described by its eminent author as the "building outward rather than inward" and the adaptation of a utilitarian architectural beauty to its environment.

His own creations, he said, are so linked with modern social progress and future developments that they are, in effect, sermons in stone.

"I don't build a house without predicting the end of the present social order," he said. "Every building is a missionary."

The reactions of notables in Williamsburg to his criticism of the Rockefeller development brought smiles of amusement to the soft-spoken architect whose creations have been adopted more widely abroad than in this country.

He laughed at the suggestion of Prof. Charles Harrison, of the College of William and Mary, that he is "over-romantic." He insisted that he is the realist, and his critics the romanticists.

"Beauty is something natural to time, place and man," he said. "If Thomas Jefferson were alive today he would be in my shoes and would be more bitter than I over the neglect of realities."

Start Pressed On Thomas Circle Tunnel

100 Lindens to Go To Restore Some Open Bids Nov. 22 Wall to Part Lanes

Determined to assure an early start on the proposed Thomas Circle underpass, the District Commissioners yesterday approved plans for the work and said it would be necessary to sacrifice 100 trees in the immediate vicinity of the circle.

At the same time the Commissioners said they would advertise for bids with the prospect of actual work on the underpass by the first of the year. Bids will be opened November 22. The work must be completed within 300 days.

Subject of Protests

Subject of protests to the White House by irate citizens who fought to preserve the stalwart linden trees that line Massachusetts avenue between Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets, the move to untangle the congested area at Thomas Circle began five years ago.

Following word from the White House that the President would not intervene, District officials rushed plans for the underpass, which was made possible this year by Congress with an appropriation of $530,000.

"We intend to replace as many of the trees as possible," was the comment of Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst.

He explained the trees which line the curb on Massachusetts avenue would have to come down to make room for street widening necessary to construct the underpass.

Traffic on Massachusetts avenue will be directed under the circle from a point midway between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and a point two-thirds the length from Fourteenth to Thirteenth streets. The underpass will have four traffic lanes.

Fourteenth street traffic approaching the circle will pass through the circle, which will be increased in diameter by some 18 feet. Street cars on Fourteenth street will be brought to a point somewhat closer the statue in the center of the circle. In addition to the streetcar tracks, two lanes of roadway for vehicular traffic on either side of the circle will be constructed.

New Lanes for Vehicles

Running alongside the underpass on Massachusetts avenue will be two surface roads, one on either side of the underpass each providing two lanes for vehicular traffic.

Traffic on Fourteenth street, M street and Vermont avenue, which enter the circle, will be directed to the surface roads on Massachusetts avenue without entering the underpass.

Capt. Whitehurst said it would be necessary to widen Massachusetts avenue from its present 50-foot width to 92 feet. He explained this was necessary to provide adequate room to park cars.

In the underpass a solid wall will separate the traffic flow. Capt. Whitehurst said the underpass will be well enough lighted so that headlights will be superfluous.

A new system of traffic lights, which will place a rigid control on pedestrians has been completed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Whitehurst stated.

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The capabilities of George Washington University's football team, like the identity of Cock Robin's assassin, are unknown. But in the case of the former a clew will be turned up this week. It seems that on Friday night the G. W.'s will expose themselves to the University of Mississippi athletes. And on that evening, much will be learned about the mystery team of G. W.

POVICH.

It is a mystery team for the simple reason that it has already mystified the football savants by playing winning football. The Colonials were not supposed to win many games this season, but, in the words of Al Smith, let's have a look at the record:

George Washington 7, Furman 0; G. W. 26, Butler 0; G. W. 13, Colorado 0; G. W. 27, Davis-Elkins 0.

It seems that in four games, the Colonials are unbeaten, untied and unscored on. Perhaps it should be added that they are also unappreciated. But, sans the ballyhoo, the hoop-la and the circus stuff of former years, the G. W.'s have slowly insinuated themselves full into the tentative respect of the populace.

As we were saying, this was the year that the G. W.'s were not supposed to win football games. They were scrapping one system of football for the new and untried tactics of Coach Bill Reinhart. And on the squad of 35 that Reinhart inherited from Jim Pixlee were 19 sophomores, 10 juniors.

Back to Fundamentals

Reinhart, an old quarterback at Oregon, resolved one thing when he took over at the start of the year. He wouldn't hamstring a green squad with the fancy stuff of the Pixlee regime. The Pixlee spread plays and the intricate reverses were out. He'd be grateful if his young talent could learn to play straight football and perhaps execute an old-fashioned end-around play.

Well, that's what has been happening. George Washington has been playing straight football and winning ball games. Occasionally, young Billy Richardson, who couldn't make Pixlee's team, would throw a forward pass and a very good one. But in the main it has been off the tackles and around the ends that G. W. has gained. In fact, the G. W.'s have averaged only seven passes per game. Only 10 of 31 have been completed, but five of those ten were touchdown affairs. There has been nothing promiscuous about the G. W.'s passing, or perhaps it would be better put to say there has been nothing indiscriminate.

Some Stars, Too!

Reinhart apparently has done something with that G. W. line. Only one of G. W.'s four opponents has been inside the Colonials' 22-yard line. That one was Davis-Elkins which reached the 6-yard line and made a first down at that point. But at the end of four more assaults on the G. W. line, Davis-Elkins had succeeded only in losing a yard.

Little Vic Sampson with his dazzling dashes, Richardson with his forward passes and big Bob Nowaskey with his sensational end-around plays have hogged the few headlines that G. W. has merited this season, but the play of the G. W. line is Reinhart's chief thrill.

"Those fellows out front have been winning our football games for us," he was saying. "And we've been winning 'em the way I hoped we would. Folks were fed up on G. W. football, I think, because our teams were licked when our fancy stuff failed us. We didn't have any running attack. This year I set out to show them we could play straight football—sound football."

There's Colorado

And straight football has netted the G. W.'s 56 first downs to the opposition's 15. It has piled up 1,040 yards to 247 for the enemy. Furman, Butler and Davis-Elkins were not the sort of teams to cause any self-respecting coach to fear dire developments, but when the G. Ws beat Colorado they licked a better than fair club. And they won that game after trekking three-fourth of the way across the Nation.

But all estimates of George Washington's rightful place in the 1938 football scheme must necessarily be withheld until late Friday evening. Because the Colonials will then have met their first serious test of the campaign. Ole Miss is one of the country's better football teams. Of that there isn't much doubt.

The first thing Ole Miss did this season was to slap down Louisiana State, the team that was supposed to win the Southeastern Conference championship. That upset was nothing trivial when the score of 20-7 is taken into account. Then followed one-sided victories over Louisiana Tech and Mississippi State Teachers before Ole Miss, to its everlasting regret, encountered Vanderbilt.

It's No Disgrace

Vanderbilt won that game, but the defeat was not exactly a disgrace for Ole Miss. Because it seems that Mississippi was holding a 7-6 lead with only 40 seconds to play. It also seems that Vanderbilt produced a long-range forward pass to win the game a few seconds before the final whistle.

That defeat, however, didn't appear to disturb Mississippi, be-

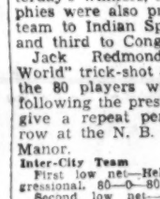
Dettweiler's Score Tops Field Day

80 at Congressional Marion Brown Has 87 Mrs. Brundage Wins Mrs. Dale Tops Class

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Congressional's Inter-city team ace, Helen Dettweiler, was the individual star of the annual field day for the District Women's Golf Association teams yesterday over her home course with a fine 44-36, 80, the back nine score coming within a stroke of men's par.



DETTWEILER

Marion Brown had the low gross score for the competing Indian Spring and Chevy Chase first team members with 44-43, 87. Mrs. C. P. Medley and Mrs. Walter Stokes tied for low net with 89s, while an Indian Spring teammate, Mrs. Betty Meckley, was next with a 91, with a scratch handicap.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern, also of the Four Corners Club, won low net of the first team captains, with 92-3, 89, while Mrs. H. J. Simons, Manor, was low second team captain, 99-8, 91, and Mrs. D. S. Platt, Manor, and Mrs. F. L. Lewis, Congressional, paced the third team captains.

Columbia Country Club Champion Mrs. H. M. Brundage scored gross 95 to top the second teams, while the third teams that played at Chevy Chase had Mrs. J. C. Dale, Kenwood, as the leader with 96.

Second team net winners include Mrs. F. Gygax, Army and Navy, with 97-10, 87, and Mrs. E. M. Amick, Columbia, and Mrs. F. G. Awalt, Congressional, with 88s.

Mrs. C. C. Minnix, Columbia, with 96-14, 82, and Mrs. H. Sharpe, Indian Spring, 98-15, 83, topped third team net winners.

A 7 on the first hole and 6 on the fifth marred Miss Dettweiler's card as she was out in 44. She started back with a string of seven 4s in a row, including a birdie on the long thirteenth, and then three-putted the seventeenth green from 10 feet. She dropped a birdie putt on 18 for the 36.

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, president of the Women's District Golf Association, presented 32 prizes to yesterday's winners, and the team trophies were also presented, the first team to Indian Spring, and second and third to Congressional.

Jack Redmond, "Round the World" trick-shot artist, entertained the 80 players with an exhibition following the presentation. He will give a repeat performance tomorrow at the N. B. C. tournament at Manor.

Walson Sets Two Bowling Marks

Charlie Walson broke two Columbia Heights League season records, and Lorraine Gulli, only woman in the league, took over first place in the race for high average last night at the Arcadia Alleys. Miss Gulli's set of 353 helped Chaconas Market to displace Arcadia in first place by beating the leaders three straight games. Her average is now about 124.

Walson, of Evan Sholl's cafe, hung up a high game mark of 181 and a high set record of 441. With a chance to set an all-time league record and even an all-time District record after he had rolled 181 and 163 in his first two games, Walson slumped all the way to 97 in the third. He needed a 164 for a new District record.

Arcade Pontiac won high team game and set honors with 653 and 1,844.

Takes Fayette Purse Card's Feature Event Pays Off at $10 6,000 Watch Races

By Walter Haight.

A Star Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 25.—Seven persons in a crowd of 6,000 stepped up to the payoff windows here and collected $1,014.80 in return for a piece of pasteboard that cost $2 about an hour before. The fortune was the reward for having selected, picked or stumbled on the right combination of "2 and 12" in the daily double.

Timber Storm, owned by E. H. Titmus, jr., a Norfolk optician, and Alter Ego, owned by O. B. Wearley, Washington seafood man, were the horses which won the all-important first and third races.

Showing a fondness for the heavy track and with a record of fair proportions on the half milers, Timber Storm scored an easy victory, Jockey Lou Machado, who was making his first saddle appearance since the Havre de Grace meeting, guided this $51.60 shot to the wire.

Time Signal Wins

Alter Ego, with Jockey J. Leyland aboard, had to fight almost all the way and barely lasted to take a neck decision from Mahlette, a field horse. A son of the mud-loving Black Servant, Alter Ego paid a $16.30 mutuel.

In the Fayette purse, a sprint of 6 furlongs in the feature position of the program, L. E. Ogle's Time Signal proved the best in a field of six. The High Time colt was away slowly, but gathered momentum on the backstretch to take the lead from Bluefield. He then shook off a challenge of Dixieland and went on to win by a length and a half with speed in reserve.

Time Signal was one of several well-played horses and brought his backers a $10 payoff. Time Please, representing the Milky Way Stable and no relation to the feature race winner, scored in the second race, paying $7.70. Tin Devil and Bogart followed the winner to the wire.

'Skins Drill On Plays to Stop Parker

Strengthen Defense Flaherty Is Cautious Dodgers Are Tough Squad in Good Shape

By Shirley Povich.

A defense designed to check Ace Parker, Brooklyn's famed back, occupied the Washington Redskins yesterday.

PARKER

Head Coach Ray Flaherty, in a clubhouse talk, warned the Washington squad that Parker's running and passing were the greatest threats the Redskins would face this season, and then he sent them on the field for a defensive workout.

With the two touchdown passes of the Philadelphia Eagles still fresh in mind, Flaherty drilled his secondaries for a full hour on aerial defense, pointing out that Parker tosses the same long heaves with which Emmett Mortell was so successful last Sunday.

Indications were that the Redskins would invade Brooklyn with the team in its finest physical condition since the opening of the season. Only Max Krause and Jay Turner were reported as casualties.

Flaherty's squad, which has beaten the Lions and the Eagles without the service of Capt. Turk Edwards at tackle, will be rejoined by the big lineman in the Dodgers' game. His shoulder injury has progressed to the point where he has the club physician's aprpoval to play.

Sammy Baugh and Charley Malone, the Redskins' most-feared passing combination, are also expected to be fit for Sunday's game. Baugh's recurrence of his shoulder injury was diagnosed yesterday as more painful than serious and he was tossing footballs in practice. Malone's injured knee is virtually healed.

Following the Redskins' success against the Eagles and Lions, Flaherty is now definitely committed to his new starting line-up which finds Riley Smith and Ernie Pinckert as the blocking backs, and Bill Hartman and Andy Farkas as the offensive threats.

Frank Filchock, who impressed Flaherty with his brief appearance in the backfield against the Eagles, will move into the Redskins' line-up along with Sammy Baugh and Ed Justice when substitutions are in order.

Deciding Schooner Race Scheduled for Today

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 25 (AP).—Fishermen of the crew of the challenging American schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud expressed dissatisfaction today over postponement until tomorrow of the deciding race with the Canadian champion Bluenose for the international fishermen's trophy.

Thebaud bested Bluenose in a blinding rainstorm yesterday to make the schooners' standing 2-all in a 3-out-of-5 title contest. The fifth contest was postponed after storm warnings had been hoisted for today.

Howard Grid Team Saved

Inter-collegiate football will be continued at Howard University, the board of trustees decided last night, after the board of athletic control rescinded a previous ruling banning the sport on a competitive basis after this year.

The action followed protest by student groups and interested members of the faculty, who protested the athletic board's decision to abandon the sport. Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of the University, was approached on the matter, and attended last week's game, in which Howard scored a 6-0 victory over West Virginia Collegiate Institute, its first triumph in two years.

A special committee has been appointed by Dr. Johnson to inquire into the athletic situation, with a view toward improving the setup and putting athletics on a more stable basis. Two years ago, it will be recalled, the football team struck, complaining about the lack of proper equipment, the absence of a training table, and the inadequate coaching staff. The traditional Thanksgiving Day game with Lincoln had to be canceled because the players preferred to attend the theater rather than play and accept the drubbing they felt they would receive.

Capital Pro Match Pairings Are Made

Tony Sylvester, golf professional at Capitol Country Club, last night announced pairings for the pro matches to be staged over his course this coming Sunday. Sylvester will be matched with Beaver Dam's low-scoring professional, Cliff Spencer.

The other three matches will feature George Differbaugh against Bob Barnett, the red-headed pro from Chevy Chase; Benny Loving of Congressional against Al Tredor of Manor, and Leo Walper against Gene Larkin of Woodmont.

28 in Cesarewitch Solonaise Favorite Six Are Scratched

Newmarket, England, Oct. 25 (AP). An "$8,000,000" race will be run tomorrow when the classic Cesarewitch is renewed over 2½ miles with one American-owned horse among the 28 eligibles.

The race, actually worth only about $15,000, will determine the distribution of approximately $7,000,000 in the Irish Hospital sweepstakes. In addition another million or so dollars probably will be wagered.

The field was reduced today with the scratching of Artist's Prince, Archduke II, Golden Shore, Tramonto, Toreador III and Celibate II.

The last callover of betting odds tonight established Sir W. Burbidge's Solonaise the 10-to-1 favorite, replacing J. P. Hornung's Dubonnet, which dropped to third place at 100 to 9.

Other odds were Snake Lightning, 100-8; Fet, 13-1; Black Speck, 14-1; Snipe Wood, 18-1; Mubarak and Stainless Stephen, 20-1; Love's Legend, 22-1; Harewood, 25-1; Earthstopper, 28-1; Corofin, 33-1; Ranfield, Miss Windsor, Tapageur, Queen's Shilling, Malkowicza, Trevisini, Gyppo and Nettlewood, 40-1; Greymantle, 50-1; Sirtam, Repondant, Fairing and Holnechase, 66-1, and Harvest Home, 100-1.

English Setter Wins

Hoyas, Colonials Work on Pass Plays

George Washington Holds 1st Secret Practice Reinhart Sharpens Club in Use of Aerials Georgetown Expects Fancy Stuff With Temple

By Jack Munhall.

A marked similarity is noted in the tactics being employed by Georgetown and George Washington as they prepare for Friday night games with probably the toughest opposition on their schedules.

Both are working overtime to develop their passing attacks and at the same time adequate defenses for the powerful running games of their rivals.

The undefeated, untied and unscored-on Colonials who will entrench themselves at Griffith Stadium to await the assault of Ole Miss' Rebels definitely are planning to scrap their heretofore power attack for a more diversified and subtle offense. Georgetown, which will invade Philadelphia to tackle Temple's Owls, likewise is depending more on the aerial game than ever before, although the passing of Jules Koshlap has been of considerable help all season and was chiefly responsible for his team's victory over Manhattan Saturday.

George Washington held its first secret workout of the year at Griffith Stadium yesterday. Behind closed doors, Coach Bill Reinhart worked at length with his passers and receivers and with Billy Richardson, Vic Sampson and Lud Urick throwing to Bob Nowaskey and Sam Babich, the Colonials resembled a real aerial circus.

They're Successful

This passing game is more or less new to G. W., for the Colonials' green squad had been given little more than straight football and plenty of instruction on the fundamentals of the game. However, when they chose to take to the air, the Colonials have enjoyed marked success as 10 completions out of 31 tries will attest.

Richardson, swarthy, stocky little halfback, will be the keyman in the Colonials' new offense and therefore can be expected to see a great deal more action than his reserve status has allowed him thus far. Sampson, whose chief claim to a reputation as the District's outstanding back, have been his brilliant and consistent running, may be a surprise. He, as well as Urick, has been showing an unexpected ability to dispatch the ball where receivers can catch it and Friday night may mark his debut as a real triple-threat back.

Georgetown's starting line-up against Temple will contain four new faces, Coach Jack Hagerty revealed yesterday, as he led his charges through a 2-hour scrimmage with the frosh.

John (Lefty) Riofski, a Nanticoke, Pa. lad who understudied Capt. Lew Hardy last season only to be beaten out for a regular berth this year by Jim Reichey, is a notable among the new regulars. The others are Jim Hill and Bill Burke, both guards

Eagles Lose To Johnnies

Bow by 19-7 Score Frank Cady Is Star Game at Eastern

The finest backfield prospect St. John's has turned out in some years, young Frank Cady, ran wild again yesterday at Eastern and sent the baby of the high schools, Anacostia, home with a 19-7 defeat.

Cady's pass to Left End Bill Hunt in the second period, after the teams had battled to no score in the opening session, earned the first touchdown of the game. Hunt went over the goal standing after carrying the ball 10 yards. Frank Daly, linesman who performs all the booting for the Johnnies, made the placement good and St. John's was ahead, never to be topped.

The second score for St. John's occurred in the same period when Bob Boyle broke away for a 45-yard gain to Anacostia's 15. Boyle again undertook to advance and this time sailed over the goal. The placement was wide. In the third period the Johnnies closed the books on scoring. Cady, continuing his brilliant pace against all opposition, took the ball on Anacostia's 15-yard marker and neatly paced the distance to the goal.

Anacostia undertook a belated rush in the final period, calling on a natural let-down of the Johnnies with their huge lead. Bill Spencer, Indian half, started from his own 40-yard line and swept through the Johnnie line and secondary to pick up 60 yards and Anacostia's sole touchdown. Spencer likewise made the conversion. Chief honors of the line went to Auggie Massino, speedy linesman of St. John's, who tackled and blocked to lead the Johnnies home ahead. Dan Williams, with an intercepted pass for a long gain to his credit, turned in a brilliant bit of defensive play.

St. John's was never in danger of losing yesterday's game. After holding the powerful St. John's scoreless in the first period, Anacostia was mainly interested in limiting the margin until Spencer broke away for his dash as the game closed.

Anacostia was hampered by injuries in both backfield and line. Robert Gordon, stellar ball-carrier, is still on the bench with a leg injury, as is Bill Koons, a linesman of considerable promise.

The loss was Anacostia's fourth this season, one other contest, with Woodrow Wilson, having resulted in a tie. The Johnnies, by the triumph, point with more power to their game with arch-rival Gonzaga, tentatively slated at this time for November 1.

Garcia Favored By Ross to Beat Armstrong Early

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Barney Ross—who should know—thinks both Henry Armstrong and Ceferino Garcia will have plenty to worry about when they meet in New York a week from tomorrow night for the world's welterweight boxing championship.

ROSS

"I've always favored a puncher," Barney said today, taking time out from inventory of the stock in his Chicago jewelry store. "For that reason I give Garcia a very good chance to win—within five or six rounds. One thing I'm certain of, and that is both boys have enough stuff to worry each other.

"Garcia has the punch and Armstrong the style. Garcia's bolo punch, a terrific uppercut, is good enough to drop Henry should it connect. If Garcia wins, I think it will be within five or six rounds. Should the bout go beyond that point I'm inclined to give Henry the edge, because his boring-in style isn't going to do Garcia any good over a 15-round distance."

Baugh Predicts Free Scoring in Pitt-Fordham Game

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh,

Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.

This year the Pitt-Fordham battle looms as a different kind of football game. Three successive 0-0 ties in the last three years led one commentator to suggest that perhaps the Panthers and the Rams hadn't been using a ball in their games.

SAMMY BAUGH.

But on Saturday at Pittsburgh I look forward to a free-scoring game. Despite the reputation of the two teams as rock-ribbed defensive outfits, there are signs that the goal lines will be crossed more than once in the battle at Pitt Stadium.

Fordham, for years a great defensive outfit, put its accent on scoring last week when it knocked over Oregon, 26 to 0. And Pitt crashed through with a 34-7 victory over Southern Methodist.

But what was important about Pitt's victory was the fact that, finally, the Panthers came up with a forward passing attack. In fact they beat Southern Methodist at its own game—passing. Jock Sutherland, if tales of Pitt's passing are true, may have one of the finest college teams in football history.

Apparently Pitt isn't content any longer to rely on sheer power. Pitt teams for years, like Minnesota's, have never trifled much with a passing game. There was a reason, of course. Pitt and Minnesota always were blessed with plenty of good football players. They could play powerhouse football because they had power plays in the line and backfield.

Other coaches, not blessed with such numerically or physically strong squads, were forced to turn to forward passes. A straight running attack takes a terrific toll out of a football team, whereas a passing game affords a physical respite while carrying a scoring threat.

If Sutherland this season has been able to introduce a passing attack to mix with the running of Goldberg, Cassiano and Stebbins, he may have the greatest of all Pitt clubs. But forward-passing games aren't developed in one season, and the passes that beat Southern Methodist might not be effective against Fordham.

However, I'm stringing with Pitt in this battle. I saw Stebbins, Goldberg and Cassiano tear Nebraska to bits last season and for straight football that was the best college running attack I've ever seen.

But speaking of passing, I want to revise my estimates of the outstanding college passers of the season. A few days ago I mentioned Tommy Thompson, of Tulsa University, and Sid Luckman, of Columbia, as the best of the college crop of 1938, but my operatives in the Southwest Conference advise me that I overlooked the fellow who may be the No. 1 passer of the lot.

He is little Davey O'Brien of my old school, Texas Christian. O'Brien was a sophomore when I was playing for T. C. U. in my senior year and I realized then that he had grand possibilities as a passer. But what I didn't know was the sensational way in which he has developed this season.

He doesn't have Thompson's height or Luckman's weight, but my informants tell me that little Davey is far and away the best passer of the lot. He's a cute one, I know. As a sophomore he had deception as well as accuracy and this year I understand he is hitting receivers at any distance.

Down in the Southwest they don't go giddy over average passers. That's where they insist on good passing. And if my friends in Texas are whooping it up for O'Brien, as they are, there's no question but what he'll do. He must be tops or thereabouts.

Before 1,000 student fans the boys in Maroon and Gray took turns at scoring from the second period on, eventually winding up on the winning end of the widest margin held in interhigh play this year. Tech, by its victory, drew away from a first-place tie with Central into a solitary place at the head of the list. Wilson, until this game undefeated, but with two ties against it, dropped back in the winless class with Anacostia and Roosevelt.

Bach Plunges Over

Playing a desperate brand of football in the opening period, the Presidents were able to hold Tech to no score and two first downs. Tech, however, was permitted to set up its initial points when Donaldson, Wilson quarterback, fumbled a Tech kick on his own 39 and Keefouver recovered. Down the field Tech plunged, with Dean and Johnny Gilmore responsible for the longest gains. As the period ended, Harold Berry, halfback, moved the ball to the 1-yard line with a 7-yard run.

Freddy Bach plunged over on the first play of the second period, and from there on it was Tech all the way. Berry converted successfully, and McKinley was soon in possession of the ball again on its own 29. The second touchdown came as Dean rushed the ball to Wilson's 33 in the same period, and Gilmore set out on another of his swivel-hipped jaunts to the goal. It was the outstanding gain of the game. Berry's kick was short when he was forced to kick from the 8-yard line because of an offside penalty.

Wilson Line Weak

Tech, the squad many observers consider a cinch for the interhigh crown, was only able to score a single touchdown in the third and one more in the fourth. A safety went to its credit, however, when Bond, Wilson quarterback, was tackled behind his own goal in the third period. Bond was forced back behind the line on one of numerous bad passes from center. Regular Center McBride committed this costly error, and later on in the game, Connolly, the center who relieved him, was also responsible for large losses because of poor passes.

It was Substitute End Jimmy Miller, who took an 18-yard pass from Don Cockrille in the third period to tally, and the final marker was hung up by Berry, the stalwart back whose punts and consecutive gains had made it possible. Berry went over from the 2-yard line, but was wide with his placement.

Besides the poor showing of Wilson centers in the game, responsibility for the loss could also be laid to the rest of the line through which Tech backs sifted much too easily. The last two periods saw Tech second-stringers making as much progress through the line as the first squad had done earlier. Cochrille, Hall and Swarr displayed a reserve power for Tech other schools will have trouble overcoming.

Ahearn Plans All-Star Fight Show

Promises Real Talent Last Card a Success Even Financially Tradition Broken

By Lewis F. Atchison.

One of boxing's finest and most sacred traditions was shattered yesterday in one fell swoop by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who poked his round head out of a telephone booth long enough to announce that the Rodak-Miller bout last Monday was a huge success viewed from any angle.

Mr. Ahearn issued his statement in one long, breathtaking blurb, then disappeared back in the booth. He was endeavoring to line up next Tuesday night's program and had long-distance calls placed to a half-dozen points—which, he argued, should be dispensed on a six-for-a-quarter basis.

But Herr Goldie lost the duke—again. He always was a sucker for a good adjective on the 'phone, where his inability to gesticulate places him at a tremendous disadvantage.

"A Big Success"

"Boys," he began, extricating himself from the booth with a spade kept handy for such emergencies, "you can say what you want, but that show (Rodak-Miller) was a success—a big success."

"How about financially?"

"Yeah, financially, too," he replied. "We didn't get rich, but we didn't lose anything. Whaddya call that, a moral victory, isn't it? Yeah, that fight was all right. We didn't have a full house, even, but don't forget, we had to raise the prices a little, and the fans who came proved that this town wants first-class attractions, and that's what we're gonna give 'em. Nothing but the best."

"You mean you're going to begin all over again with Gevinson, Abrams and the rest of those amateurs?"

"Won't Build 'Em Up."

"No, no," Goldie protested. "No, I'm convinced we haven't any good local boys around, so what's the use of foolin' with 'em? If they want to take preliminary bouts, all right, but if their managers insist on putting them in semifinals and main bouts they'll have to go someplace else to put 'em on. I'm not going to ruin my cards with 'em."

"Who are you putting on top next week?"

"You can say I'm getting an all-star lightweight program, maybe Norment Quarles against Maxie Berger, or Tony Canzoneri, or maybe Lou Ambers against Wally Hally; or maybe even Billy Beauhold against George Zengaras—that good looking Greek lightweight.

"Maybe even a return bout between Joe Louis and Max Schmeling," someone suggested.

"Listen, I'm not joking," Ahearn protested. "I'm serious when I say we're gonna get the best and nothing but the best. It's no use fooling with these palookas and trying to build 'em up. I spend my time and energy making a fighter popular—like that Archibald, and what happens? He gets grabbed up by an out-of-town promoter. From now on I'm gonna let somebody else build 'em up and then grab 'em for myself. After all I gotta protect myself—and the public."

"Can we quote you Goldie?"

Down in Front

With Richards Vidmer

The Magnificent Fake

New York, Oct. 24.—The Columbia special was rolling toward Philadelphia—not back from Philadelphia—so there was gaiety and light laughter and high excitement running through the cars. Old grads and undergrads and the lovely ladies of both were having a merry time, but when a short, stocky young fellow with lively eyes dropped into the seat beside me we talked mostly of games gone by instead of the one looming up at the end of the train ride.

We talked of the little moments remembered in the heat of battle, little thrills that vanished briefly, mistakes and lucky breaks.

"I guess your greatest thrill came from that run you made against Stanford, didn't it?" I asked.

VIDMER.

But George Furey, last of the Furey brothers at Columbia, who took the opening kick-off and carried it the length of the field for the only touchdown of the last Columbia-Stanford game, shook his head.

"No," he said, "I don't think so. There really wasn't much to it as far as I was concerned. The other fellows just did a great job of blocking. As a matter of fact, only one Stanford man ever got close enough to lay a hand on me.

"Of course, I look back on it with a lot of pleasure, though. For one thing, it was one of the two games my brother Ralph ever saw me play. Here's something funny. Ralph was always scouting while I was playing at Columbia, and every Monday after he had seen the moving pictures of the previous Saturday's game, he would come over to me and shake his head.

"'You didn't look very good in there, George,' he would say. 'You missed a block in the first quarter and I didn't think your quarterbacking was any too smart, either.'

"He'd always say things like that. Then he finally saw a game I was playing in. It was the Dartmouth game my senior year, and I scored two touchdowns—the first time I had scored, incidentally. The next game he saw me play was the Stanford game, and afterward he came up and said I did pretty well.

"I guess that's about the biggest thrill I ever got. When he said I had done pretty well I felt I must have been really wonderful."

One Lesson Learned Well

"It must have been tough, blocking all the time," I said. "I always hated to block."

"Yes, there's nothing like lugging that ball. That's the real fun. But when I was a sophomore, Lou Little took one look at me and said I was going to be a blocker. So you know damn well I had to be one."

"Yes, I know that Lou is a pretty tough gent when he sets his mind on something."

"I should say he is. But what a faker! Gee, I remember when I was a freshman and I would hear him bellowing at those varsity players, I used to shake and hope I never would have to play under him. You know how he can bellow. What a faker!

"Why do you call him a faker?"

"Because he sounds so hard hearted and callous and works the daylights out of his players and all the time he would cut off his right arm for any of them. He wouldn't let them think that for the world, but they learn what a sweet soul he is after they get away from him and the same fellows who would gladly cut his throat when he's teaching them a job, would lay down and die for him the next day."

"You know," George said, "there isn't a single fellow who ever played under Lou, either at Columbia or Georgetown, not even a third string guard, he's lost sight of or forgotten. Every year he checks up on his old players—sends them each a regular questionnaire wanting to know how they're getting along, if they have a job, if they like the work they're doing, if they need any money. Every year when I get that, I want to send it back and simply say:

"'I don't care anything about any of you fellows, all I care about is winning games!'"

Bawls Out Wrestlers May Bar Offenders Dusek Meets Meske Match Is Tomorrow

Promoter Joe Turner has dusted off his own private copy of the riot act, embossed and handsomely framed, and prepared to orate a bit before turning the pachyderms loose in the center ring tomorrow night at the Arena. Turner, it seems, wants the boys to be more careful with their punches.

With such well known villains as Bibber McCoy, Ernie Dusek and Ed Newman on the program, the matchmaker is taking added precautions to protect the patrons from assault and battery. Last week the Golden Terror indulged in a small amount of horse-play outside the ring that almost had painful consequences, and Uncle Joe wants no repitition of it.

The Terror smacked one gent on his bald pate, booted another in the seat of his pants, chased another wielding an umbrella to cover, and even threatened a lady. That was a little too much for Mr. Turner, who draws the line at menacing ladies.

McCoy is an old offender. He parted Bennah Bortnick's hair with his fist a couple of months ago, almost laying the rotund melon peddler as numb as a frost-bitten finger, and he has had several run-ins with paying guests at the matches. Turner has wagged a figurative finger at him via mail, and threatens to banish him from the District if he breaks bounds again.

Turner has taken punitive measures gainst some of the boys before. Two years ago he imposed a six-months ban on George Koverly, and later banned Laverne Baxter for six months for inciting riots. More recently Ernie Dusek was disqualified at the stadium for slugging Referee Al Morelli during a match with Steve Casey, although neither Turner nor the fans blamed him. Dusek got the works that night, and the referee should have been banned.

Tomorrow night's card is headed by Dusek against Ed Meske, with McCoy battling Yvon Robert in the semifinal. The winners probably will be matched the following week, although nothing definite has been settled along this line.

Other bouts include Chick Garibaldi vs. Chris Zaharias; Reb Russell vs. Steve Budynas, and Tony Colisano vs. Ed Newman.

Eagles Rest Regulars For Game Saturday

American University, fresh from its 20-0 victory over St. John's, of Annapolis, has been taking things easy this week in order to rest nine regulars who played the entire game Saturday.

Emerson Bartlett, the sensational halfback who scored 19 points against the Johnnies, and Benjamin are practically recovered from injuries and are ready for service against Hampden-Sydney Saturday.

Mrs. Myatt Divorced From Giants' Infielder

San Diego, Calif., Oct. 25 (AP).—Georgia Myatt, star softball pitcher on a girl's team, won a divorce by default today from George Myatt, third baseman for the New York Giants.

The court awarded her $50 a month for support of Dyanna Gail Myatt, their infant daughter.

The Myatts were married at home plate on Lane Field here two years ago when Myatt was shortstop for the San Diego team. They separated last March.

Postscripts . . . .

At the weekly sportswriters' luncheon yesterday: . . . After the triple-threat knife and fork men had completely devastated a three-course line of soup, chicken a la king and pie, there ensued the usual and delightful mixture of inside stories on the college and professional games over the week-end and tickling tales by Gus Welch, Frank Dobson, Harry Costello and other old-time football followers. Welch, wily American University coach, as usual, came through with a pip. He related how his new formation which throws seven blockers out in front of the runner failed against St. John's, of Annapolis. This innovation of Welch's—sort of a seven-man offensive line—is used at Welch's signal of "let 'er go." In the second quarter of the game, the Johnnies kicked out of bounds, giving A. U. the ball. So Welch gave his order and his boys complied so rapidly the referee had to scramble to keep from being trampled. It was a great success as the Eagles' ball-carrier swept downfield and into the clear behind his tandemlike interference. Now only one defender, the St. John's safetyman, was between him and a touchdown. But something happened. The blockers in a terrific hurry to cross the goal line, perhaps, and congratulate the runner on his arrival there, neglected to knock the safetyman out of the play. And so he made the tackle when the Eagles' runner staumbled into his arms by the sidelines where the safetyman had fled from an imaginary danger created by the fearsome sight of seven blockers bearing down upon him. Welch tore his hair and hardly could wait until halftime when he could find out why the safetyman had been allowed to remain on his feet. "Well, Coach," one of the players told him, "you told us when you gave that signal to start running and don't stop for anything." Welch was revived several hours later.

An interesting argument developed on the much-discussed question of whether the point after touchdown in football should be abolished. Jack Hagerty, Georgetown coach, whose team only Saturday beat Manhattan on a conversion, led the cons and Frank Dobson, Maryland coach; Owner George Marshall of the Redskins, and Harry Costello, former Georgetown star dropkicker, provided hot opposition.

Dobson, Costello, Marshall & Co. refuted Hagerty's argument by pointing out that the placement kick for point certainly was a team play, for wasn't it necessary for the kicker to be afforded blocking by his mates and cooperation by the man holding the ball. They also pointed out that the try for point was one of football's most thrilling plays and its abolition would remove one of the things that have made it the popular game that it is today.

AS THE NEW season of debs and dances swings ahead, the year's smoking vogue steps along with it. Go to Meadowbrook or the St. Regis, Tuxedo or the Plaza, you'll find that when the sophistocrat chooses his cigar, he smokes the trim, suave Robt. Burns Panatela de Luxe.

He likes its long, elegant gracefulness — so unobtrusive — befitting a high bred profile and formal evening attire. He likes the tacit approval accorded it by women of fashion.

On Fishing

Several swell strings of crappie have been caught in the Potomac during the past several days. At the end of the race near Chain Bridge, out in front of Joe Fletchers, and in pet places anglers wouldn't divulge for love nor money.

Around the seawall and in the stretch up to and above Key Bridge, a few fine bass are being caught, although we don't recommend these locations if the catch is to be eaten, for we can see not the slightest abatement in the amount of sewerage being dumped in the Eastern Branch and carried up the Potomac with every flood tide.

ACKERMAN.

Not that these fish are not edible, if thoroughly cooked, but just that we can't go for them, knowing from where they come.

Several tautogs, weighing from one to five pounds, were caught at Point No Point Lighthouse last week. Identified, beyond any doubt, as to the species, this is the farthest point up the bay we have ever heard of this tackle-buster being caught. But on a bottom that is extremely to their liking, and the possibility that they might increase to the stage where they could supply sport for many anglers isn't a thought to be lightly dismissed.

If anyone might think we are talking about the occasional seabass taken in this area, forget it. These fellows, that often reach a length of 3 feet and a weight of more than 30 pounds, are noted for their teeth. Teeth that will crush the shell of the largest oysters with ease, and a hide so tough that the only thing to do with it is to take it off, leaving flesh which ranks high among bottom fish.

We are informed of a proposed bill, to be introduced in the Maryland Legislature when it opens in January, that would tax users of shotgun shells in Maryland an additional 5 cents per box. The receipts of this tax is to be used for the proper functioning of the Game Commission.

Are Maryland sportsmen expected to swallow such a proposal, when for years funds obtained by the sale of hunting licenses have been diverted to the general treasury? Even the Democratic nominee for Governor, Herbert R. O'Conor, is making an issue of this misuse of sportsmen's money, promising correction if he is elected.

Why should users of shells, and 50 per cent of those used are by skeet and trap shooters, be asked to carry this additional burden while such conditions exist? Should the diversion of funds stop, and a tax still necessary, then place it where it belongs—on the hunters, by an increased fee for hunting licenses?

The election, by acclamation, of Talbot Denmead, Chief Enforcement Officer U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, to fill for the sixth year the presidency of the Maryland Game and Fish Protection Association, is particularly to the liking of all who know him, or of his work. It augers well for the completion of the work of getting complete, State-wide protection for the black bass.

It would be fitting and proper that this be accomplished while he is in office, to add another stepping stone to a successful walk of conservation that has covered a period of 40 years.

Annapolis was the unanimous selection of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association to be the scene of the 1939 Fishing Fair. A local scribe, Bob Wilson, was added to the roster of directors, with Johnny Mock, Ourdoors Editor of the Pittsburgh Press, whose stories are followed, not only from one end of the State of Pennsylvania to the other, but as well, by anglers and hunter in several contiguous States.

It was extremely satisfying to see eight of the high school boys, members of the junior organization of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Izaak Walton Chapter, at the meeting of the parent organization, and the interest they showed in the work being carried on, for the young years are the formative years—the right years to instill the right kind of conservation.

Even now, there is much they can do—such as the growing and tending, in some small corner of the back yard, seedling nut and berry trees and bushes, to later set them along some hedgerow or water course, for correction of pollution isn't the only thing needed to bring our streams back to their former beauty and usefulness.

Abner Roe, the aggressive chairman of the pollution committee, that accomplished so much during the past summer, was elected president. Elmer E. Huffer, vice president; Ted Vollten, secretary, and Fred Ringler, treasurer.

Poosh-em Up Wants to Play Again

Has No Future Plans Wrigley Is Surprised Hasn't Released Him But Would, if Asked

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 25.—Tony Lazzeri said today he had asked and received his unconditional release from the Chicago Cubs.

LAZZERI

Lazzeri said he had nothing in mind for the future but "hoped to do some more playing."

He joined the Cubs last spring after obtaining his outright release from the New York Yankees. Phil K. Wrigley, owner and president of the Cubs, announced then Lazzeri had been signed as a player and coach.

It was predicted at the time Lazzeri would step in as manager if Charley Grimm was ousted, but Gabby Hartnett got the job and Lazzeri rested on the bench.

Release Surprise To Wrigley

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Owner P. K. Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs, said today that Tony Lazzeri, player-coach on the Chicago National League baseball team, "has made no formal request for his unconditional release and naturally has not been given it."

Informed that Lazzeri had announced in San Francisco that he had been granted his unconditional release from the Cubs, Wrigley said:

"Lazzeri called me a few days ago and asked whether he could get his release in case he wanted to 'go shopping.' He was informed that he could. When he was signed after leaving the New York Yankees he was told he would be able to obtain his release any time he had an opportunity to better himself."

Wrigley signed Lazzeri, star for more than a decade with the Yanks, because he thought Lazzeri would add aggressiveness to the Cub offense. During the first few weeks of the 1938 season Tony played often and brilliantly but he slumped and was used but little for the remainder of the campaign. As a pinch hitter, however, he got a double which played a big part in the Cubs' sweep of the three-game Pittsburgh series which aided the Bruins to the National League flag.

cause last Saturday it bounced back to knock off a capable Centenary eleven, 47 to 14. Mississippi power unfolded itself in the last quarter of that game. They rolled up four touchdowns in those last 15 minutes.

This, then, is the kind of a team that G. W. will be facing out there under the lights at Griffith Stadium. And there is no comfort for G. W. coaches, either, in the realization that Ole Miss is bringing along in one Parker Hall the best running back in the South this year and the Conference's highest scorer. Or that "Bruiser" Kinard, Mississippi's All-American guard of last year didn't exactly quit cold on Ole Miss when he graduated. He left two of his younger but bigger brothers in the Old Miss line.

But this may be the week in which G. W. will wipe out the memory of that 27-6 defeat by Ole Miss last year. It can happen, to hear G. W. folks tell it, and it's not difficult to string along with a team that hasn't surrendered a touchdown.

N. J. Club Plans Indoor Polo

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Pegasus Club, of Rockleigh, N. J., made such a success of its first year in outdoor polo it has decided to play the game indoors—in an airplane hangar.

Douglas Hertz, sportsman, purchased an all-glass, shatter-proof dirigible hangar at Curtis Field, on Long Island. The huge shed will be transported in sections to Rockleigh and set up.

who went great against Manhattan, and Tom Robertson, tackle.

The use of Hill and Burke will send to the bench Augie Lio, who kicked the winning point against Manhattan, and Mark Ostinato, one of the stalwarts of the strong Georgetown line. Robertson is to replace Earl Fullilove.

The scrimmage, only one scheduled for Georgetown this week, was spent briefly in polishing up passing and blocking. Blocking, one of Georgetown's weaknesses, must necessarily be improved if the Hoyas forward pass attack is to click. In the Manhattan game Koshlap's pass which the Jaspers intercepted and converted into their second touchdown was not accurate, due mostly to the way the Manhattan linemen hurried the thrower.

Despite the gladdening news Quarterback Charlie Weidinger and Halfback Joe Murphy probably will be able to play, Maryland yesterday reconciled itself to the prospect of sending a patched line-up against V. M. I. in its homecoming game Saturday.

Bob Brown, big tackle, is definitely out. He was injured on the first play of the game with Virginia.

V. M. I., which Maryland has beaten 9 times in 16 games, will be favored this time, for the Cadets presently are tied with Virginia for the lead of the Virginia State race and also is well up in the Southern Conference. It has lost only to Navy, while defeating Elon and Richmond and tying Virginia and Clemson.

Featured in V. M. I.'s strong backfield is Paul Shu, former Alexandria High School star, who last season became one of the few sophomores ever to win All-Conference recognition. Another dangerous V. M. I. back is Andy Trzeciak, remembered here as a fine all-around athlete. He scored heavily in track against the Terps last spring and proved equally bad medicine on the court.

St. Louis University's Billikens, who will provide the opposition for Catholic University Saturday at C. U. Bowl, will bring five sharp-shooting passers, according to press releases. Accordingly, Coach "Dutch" Bergman already is at work bolstering the Cardinals' pass defense, very impotent against Detroit and but slightly improved last week against West Virginia Wesleyan.

St. Louis has won two games, lost two and tied one. The Billikens started badly, dropping decisions first to Bradley Tech, 6 to 0, and then to Tulsa, 28 to 0. Lately, however, they have shown improvement, trimming Missouri Miners, 13 to 0, and Grinnell, 26 to 0, and tying Wichita University.

Our Guest Selector

Our guest selector for today is Vic Carroll, Washington Redskins, star center. Vic shines in the line on Sundays and, occasionally, he stands in line at Laurel—to collect. Although a Redskin, he's better than a green hide at picking the horses and welcomed a chance to give his handicaps for The Post's readers. He is warning his friends, however, to take it easy on his selections, during the rather short notice they were going to be public property. He says he'i passing them along, even if he has to duck when the Redskins play their final game here a week from Sunday. Here they are:

1—Apprehend, Crestonian, Wes.
3—Mayro, Army and Navy, Boosel.
4—Evening Light, Santiago, Blaze Around.
5—Redlin, Ebony Blue, Good Odds.
6—Chimney Top, Wild Count, Palan.
7—Gold Knightess, Fly Me, Primewick.
8—Head Hunter, Wispy, Orthoprism.
Best bet—Chimney Top.

Judge Upholds Track In Eligibility Suit

Boston, Oct. 25 (AP).—Race track operators have "no obligation to determine the eligibility of horses" running on the track, Justice Marcus Morton, of Superior Court, ruled tdoay in dismissing a suit against the Eastern Racing Association, which holds races at Suffolk Downs.

Olivia Finlay, of Revere, and others sued the association to collect on daily double tickets after the horse first announced as winner of the race in question was declared ineligible.

At The Post

Dear Al: Selections at Laurel.

I have received word from the West Virginia Racing Commission that the horses, Many Colors and Hail America, have been reinstated. These were among the horses suspended when Trainer Chapman was banned for 60 days for stimulating Gold D'Or at Wheeling. The commission has since discovered that Chapman only leased these horses from the Three Cousins Farm for the duration of the Wheeling meeting. Donald Hay, who handled the summer meeting at Charles Town, has been named mutuel manager for the December 1 to 15 meeting. Hay is assistant to H. A. M. Frank at Laurel, Delaware and Havre de Grace. War Admiral and Seabiscuit did a little galloping at Pimlico yesterday. The track was muddy and the rivals did little more than exercise. Jockey Lou Machado, of Charles Town, Hagerstown, Marlboro, etc., arrived yesterday from Fall River, Mass., and took his first mount since Havre de Grace. Shortly after his Tomoca won the third race on Monday, Owner-Trainer Sherrill Ward was rushed to the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore, where he underwent an appendectomy. The Millsdale Stable has 28 horses here and the gang will be shipped to Pimlico Sunday. There's one box unsold for the Pimlico meeting. It is located near the top of the homestretch. Jacola, Edward Friendly's great filly, is beginning to pay the penalty of defeating Seabiscuit and others. She must carry 117 pounds if she goes to the post on Saturday in the $15,000 added Washington Handicap. Jacola carried only 102 when she broke the track record here. Aneroid, John Manfuso's stake horse, also has been assigned 117 pounds. Some of the other weights are Esposa, 123; Hypocrite, 107; Idle Miss, 113; Lucky Omen, 105; Mr. Canron, 114; Regal Lily, 109; Savage Beauty, 107; The Chief, 112 and Sun Alexandria, 106. Claiming at this meeting has set a record. To date 29 horses have changed hands by this route with $61,550 figuring in the transfers.

Steel Votes Dividend but Reports Loss

Business Improving
Employment Gains

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 25.—The United States Steel Corporation reported today a $5,874,791 deficit for the September quarter, but the directors, with what was regarded as a gesture of confidence in the business future, voted an unearned dividend of more than $6,000,000 on the preferred stock. The dividend was the regular $7.75, payable November 19 to stock of record October 28.

The quarter's deficit was about $700,000 larger than the loss reported in the June quarter despite an increase in business. Steel circles believed the increased loss was the result chiefly of the general cut in steel prices made late in June, averaging about $6 a ton.

The third quarter deficit compared with a loss of $5,010,426 in the three months ended last June. For the third quarter last year, when steel operations were still at a relatively high rate, the corporation had net income of $30,617,638, equal to $2.79 a share of common stock.

Edward R. Stettinius, the 38-year-old chairman, said he thought the dividend action "would be encouraging to everyone." He would not, however, express an opinion on general business prospects.

Big steel's shipments of finished products in the September quarter totaled 1,577,870 tons, representing 34.6 per cent of capacity compared with 1,445,110 tons, or 32 per cent of capacity in the second quarter.

No Profit Yet

Stettinius said that the increased demand for steel products which developed about the middle of July "has since shown further improvement but during the third quarter did not advance to a point where under existing market conditions and high costs of operation a profit was possible. In neither the second nor third quarters did the corporation cover the preferred dividend.

For the nine months ended September 30 the corporation operated at a deficit of $12,150,368. For the like period last year it had net income of $90,852,853, equal to $4.95 a share on common stock.

"Operations in the first weeks in October," said the statement, "have averaged better than 43 per cent of capacity."

Regarding spending on plant improvement and modernization the corporation said it was being limited largely to work under way for some time and rapidly nearing completion. Such expenditures for the year to September 30, for property outlays and retirement of capital obligations, totaled $64,500,000.

Gradual improvement in the operating rate, the statement added, "is permitting more satisfactory employment to a larger number of our workers." For the nine months the corporation had 201,533 employes and total pay roll of $202,488,466. For the comparable period last year employes numbered 263,542 with pay roll at $354,217,827.

Republic Steel

Cleveland, Oct. 25 (AP).—Consolidated net loss of Republic Steel Corporation and subsidiaries for the third quarter of 1938 after deduction of all charges amounted to $2,387,556, the quarterly income statement said today. This compares with net loss of $3,062,564 for the first quarter and $2,856,317 for the second quarter of 1938.

Jones & Laughlin

Pittsburgh, Oct. 25 (AP). — The Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and subsidiaries reported today a consolidated net loss of $1,958,610 for the third quarter ended September 30 and a loss of $4,882,838 for the first nine months of 1938.

Inland Steel

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Inland Steel Co. and subsidiaries today reported net income for the quarter ended September 30 of $1,098,245, or 60 cents a share, compared with $1,135,096 the preceding quarter and $4,433,374, or $2.82 a share, the corresponding 1937 period. Directors voted a cash dividend of 50 cents a share payable December 1 to stockholders of record November 15. This was the same as has been paid the past two quarters.

December Cotton Gains

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Irregular fluctuations continued to characterize cotton today. Near months were firm and distants easier. December sold up from 8.41 to close at a high of 8.48 with final quotations 7 points net higher to 1 lower.

Steady Liverpool cables and trade buying of nearby deliveries strengthened early trading and firmness of the spot cotton situation was said to be aiding price fixing. Mill buying of raw cotton was reported to be restricted, however, by quietness of the cotton goods markets.

Wheat Firm Despite Drop At Liverpool

Advance Near Close
Offerings Scarce
Corn Prices Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Notwithstanding 2⅜ cents a bushel tumble at Liverpool quotations, Chicago wheat values today maintained relative poise, and at the last more than overcame fractional downturns.

The principal cause assigned for the Liverpool drop—acceptance of delivery of United States yellow hard wheat on contracts at Liverpool—was construed in various quarters here as a stimulus for holders of Chicago wheat futures. Much of the wheat available in the region adjacent to Chicago is of the yellow hard variety.

Notable dearth of offerings here became evident in the last 15 minutes of trading, and prices moved up swiftly. May and July rose a full cent from the day's bottom level, and ended around topmost figures reached.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures taken as a whole were unchanged to ½ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish. December, 65⅞@65¾; May, 67⅞@68; Corn, ¼ cent off to ⅛ up; December, 46⅝@46¾; May, 49⅞@50. Oats, unchanged to ⅛ advance. Rye, showing ⅜ to ½ climb, and provisions unchanged to a bulge of 5 cents.

10% of Trade Stocks Mount to New Highs
Steel and Aircraft Issues Lead Advance
Railroad Bonds in Demand

New York, Oct. 25.—While Wall Street awaited third-quarter earnings reports from U. S. Steel Corporation and other large companies today, stocks consolidated some of the ground gained in recent sessions. Evidences of irregularity, seen in small fractional changes on both sides at the close, were by no means conclusive. An analysis of last quotations disclosed that 99 of 903 stocks traded recorded new highs for the year or longer, or better than 10 per cent. This was quite impressive, especially in a session during which the buying side was obviously under restraint. Volume was lower at 1,487,900 shares and the composite of 100 key stocks moved ahead 0.12 point.

Bonds showed strength in some sections, notably speculative liens and in recent flotations, many of the latter being quoted at premiums over offering prices. Foreign exchanges were up slightly against the dollar and further gold shipments from London were announced. Cotton and wheat were steady, the former ending 7 points higher to 1 lower and the latter being unchanged to half a cent up, despite rather acute weakness at Liverpool.

Steels and aviations were prominent among individual shares to penetrate to new high levels, but few of them were able to hold early advances. Steel common, for example, sold up to 66⅛, falling back to close at 65⅝ for a net gain of ¼.

Bethlehem, less active, came off with a full point gain. In general, the steel reports, including those from U. S. Steel, Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Jones & Laughlin and Inland, confirmed forecasts that third quarter showings would be little if any better than second quarter despite higher rate of operations, due to lower prices.

Steel Statement

Considering Big Steel averaged less than one-third of plant capacity employed in the September quarter, the net loss of approximately the same as for the June period will probably be accepted as satisfactory. Declaration of the regular dividend on preferred was in line with the Street's expectations. Comment from steel trade circles probably will emphasize the thought that break-even points in steel-making are going to be lower than estimated at the time of the price cuts in June. In the case of U. S. Steel, it is felt, operations of 38 to 40 per cent, will represent coverage of all charges and preferred dividends and an average that high or higher is now expected over the fourth quarter.

Among new highs were those by Douglas Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright, North American Aviation, United Aircraft and Sperry. Woolworth advanced more than a point while Johns-Manville declined 1½. Coppers as a group edged forward, with a small advance in scrap copper an influence. Mark-ups in scrap have, in recent months, usually preceded an advance in quotations for newly mined copper.

Betterment in railroad earnings, as disclosed by the September reports, aided the carrier section where small gains were the rule. Oils were inclined to ease in the afternoon after holding well in the morning and motors were more or less neglected, with prices down a bit.

Nickel Plate Bonds Strong

The bond market advanced moderately today with second grade rail liens and industrial issues leading with substantial gains that lifted some issues into new highs for the year. Volume on the stock exchange was moderate at $7,870,000 par value, up from $7,500,000 Monday.

Nickel plate issues were strong, the 6 per cent notes rising to within 5 points of par, followed by the longer term issues. Illinois Central issues were in new high ground. Others active on the upside were New Orleans, Texas & Mexico bonds, some of the New York Centrals, Seaboard Airline issues and Southern Pacific obligations.

The inactive Lake Erie & Western second 5s dropped 40½ points from their previous sale figure to 55 on the sale of one bond. The previous sale was on January 15. High grade rails were unchanged to slightly lower on moderately active trading.

ICC Proposal Erases Mo. Pac. Stockholdings

Slashes Interest Debt
Simplifies Set-Up
Advises Mergers

By the Associated Press.

An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner recommended yesterday reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad system with a sharp reduction in its fixed interest debt. The examiner, R. H. Jewell, said holdings of all stockholders should be wiped out.

Jewell proposed that the new company have a total fixed interest debt of $188,729,500 compared with $505,033,721 for the present system. Total capitalization would be $553,898,000 compared with $671,205,664. Total annual charges under Jewell's proposal would be $20,468,013 compared with $29,108,019 as now.

Fixed interest would be $7,414,265 compared with $24,770,052 under the present system. Total charges prior to dividends on stock would be $15,019,113 compared with $25,598,514.

The examiner recommended consolidation of owned properties which now are being operated as the Missouri Pacific System, with the exception of the Missouri-Illinois railroad.

"A consolidation of the various system companies upon reorganization will permit a simplified capital structure," Jewell said. "The competition afforded by the entry of the Southern Pacific Lines into the Rio Grande Valley in January, 1927, furnishes an additional reason why Pacific properties into one strong competing company should be advantageous both to the debtors and to the public."

The lines of railroads proposed to be consolidated, he said, are not parallel or competitive and none is assigned to any other system in the commission's railroad consolidation proposal.

Jewell said that as of January 1, 1938, the aggregate indebtedness of the Missouri Pacific System was $618,487,780.

Third Nazi Loan Is Oversubscribed

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP).—The German government's third loan issue of 1938 "for continuing the tasks assumed by the Reich government" was oversubsribed today.

The loan closed with subscriptions totaling 350,000,000 marks ($140,000,000) more than 1,500,000,000 marks ($600,000,) which the government asked when it announced the loan October 1. Germans said this reflected the German people's strengthened faith in the Nazi state since Adolf Hitler's victory in Sudetenland.

Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., and Otis & Co., as syndicate managers of a group of 86 underwriters and of more than 600 selling group dealers, are offering to the public today at 99½ per cent and accrued interest a new issue of $50,000,000 The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. 10-year 3½ per cent debentures due October 1, 1948. These debentures, representing the first direct obligation of the company to be offered publicly in the 38-year history of its business, will constitute Firestone's only funded debt and will be supported by equities, having a book value on July 31 of $110,569,000.

The proceeds will be used to retire $5,555,000 of Firestone of California 15-year 5 per cent bonds, called for redemption on September 1, and to retire $7,272,000 of the 20-year 5 per cent bonds of Firestone Cotton Mills due March 1, 1948, to be called for redemption on March 1, 1939, and the remainder will be used to provide added working capital and to retire bank loans incurred since October 1, 1933, incident to the expansion of plant and increase in working capital required by a rising scale of operations. The bank loans, all of which are to be retired by this financing, were $33,020,000 on October 15, a reduction of $8,355,000 from the $41,375,000 outstanding on July 31.

At July 31 consolidated current assets were $89,733,029, including cash of $13,236,000; and current liabilities, excluding bank loans, all of which are to be retired out of the proceeds of the financing, amounted to $8,167,219. Plant account, net of depreciation reserves, was $74,929,991, and miscellaneous other assets aggregated about $9,000,000.

Sinking Fund Provision

The indenture under which the debentures are issued provides for a fixed minimum sinking fund for the retirement by October 1 of each year, commencing in 1939, of $1,500,000 principal amount. In addition, an earnings sinking fund is set up to retire by April 1 in each year, starting in 1940, $1,200,000 principal amount or such lesser amount as may be represented by 20 per cent of the consolidated net income of the company for the preceding fiscal year.

In addition to Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., and Otis & Co., the principal underwriters include Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., Blyth & Co., Inc., Lehman Brothers, the First Boston Corporation, Lazard Freres & Co., Glore, Forgan & Co., Kidder Peabody & Co., Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., Lee Higginson Corporation, Hayden, Stone & Co., White, Weld & Co., W. How to Torture Your Husband

OH, IT'S A GOOD MINK COAT SO FAR AS THE SKINS ARE CONCERNED, BUT IT'S OUT OF STYLE. I'VE GOT TO HAVE IT RE-TAILORED, THAT'S ALL. THEY'RE GOING BACK TO THE SAME MODE AS WHEN I BOUGHT IT FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

Bob Burns Says—

If you went into a big office lookin' for a henpecked man, your first choice would be the little dried up, meek lookin' bookkeeper. You'd never think of pickin' the big boss of the organization.

I happen to know one of them big bosses who's a tyrant in his office. Everybody shudders when he speaks and he has it thoroughly understood that his word is final.

I happened to be in his office one time when his wife dropped in. He sat at his desk, pale and silent, while she raked him over the coals and laid the law down to him and after she'd gone, I said, "Well, you didn't have the final word in that argument!" He said, "Oh, yes I did—didn't you hear me say, 'Yes, dear'?"

Dewey Chides Lehman on Albany Backing

Brands It Corrupt Farley Admits Link Governor Hits Utilities

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Five thousand persons here tonight heard District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for Governor, pile charge after charge of political corruption upon the O'Connell machine, which dominates this county, and ask his opponent, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, to speak out on the same subject.

He alleged an O'Connell dominated city government made a practice of lowering tax assessments for its friends and raising the assessments of its political foes.

Dewey charged that the O'Connell machine has broken down the franchise by fraudulent registration and wholesale vote buying; that it packed grand juries with Democratic organization leaders in investigations of voting frauds, and that minor government employes found to be voting the Republican ticket, have been summarily dismissed and their families persecuted.

"I don't know the O'Connells personally," he said, "but I am willing to discuss them fully and frankly. Can the Governor say as much?

"I have never used and I shall never permit the use of my appointive power to put henchmen of the O'Connells into public office and strengthen their grasp on the city of Albany. Can the Governor say as much?"

Lehman Hits Utilities

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, climaxed the most intensive day thus far in his up-State campaign for re-election at a Democratic rally here tonight with a charge that, since 1892, the Republican Party's record of handling the State's resources, particularly natural water supplies, has showed it to be "the spearhead for private utility raids upon the State's property."

O'Connells at Parley

New York, Oct. 25.—Postmaster General James A. Farley denied today that Dan O'Connell, one of the three brothers who run the Democratic machine in Albany, had sat on a bed in a Rochester hotel bedroom helping to persuade Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to run again for Governor against his will, as charged by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey Monday night.

But O'Connell was in the room, Farley admitted in response to questions, and while he did not sit on a bed, as Mr. Dewey insisted, he did sit "in a nice comfortable chair."

In fact, said Farley, Dan's brother, Ed, was in the room, a fact not disclosed by Dewey.

Health in U. S. Is Held 100 Years Behind the Times

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 25 (AP).—The health condition of the average American citizen is 100 years behind what it should be, Dr. Abel Wolman, of Baltimore, Md., new president of the American Public Health Association, said today.

Despite the fact that the death rate for the first half of the year in the United States was lower than at any time in history, it still was far too high compared with what can be done by the widespread use of existing medical and health knowledge in a national health program, the president said.

At the same time, Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service, declared in another address at the association's annual convention here that a health program to extend such knowledge will be presented at the next session of Congress, in January.

In an attack on leaders of the American Medical Association Dr. Parran said "the majority of medical opinion in the country" as seen in the meeting of its house of delegates in Chicago last month "is more liberal in its view of national health problems than some of their spokesmen had indicated."

St. Louis, Oct. 25 (AP).—The American Dental Association was pronounced ready today to co-operate with the Federal and State governments in any feasible and ethical plans in connection with the dental health of the American people.

Dr. C. Willard Camelier, of Washington, president of the association, said it would insist, however, that any public health program provide for professional leadership and retain the principle of free choice of the dentist by the patient.

Dr. Camelier was the principal speaker at the first general session of the association's annual convention.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—The forty-ninth annual meeting of the Association of American Medical Colleges turned today to a discussion of teaching methods after hearing trends toward socialized medicine described as "communistic and incompatible with American traditions."

The commentary on socialized medicine was delivered by Chancellor William P. Graham, of Syracuse University.

CAPUDINE

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday night, with Sergei Rakhmaninov as soloist. Program: "Leonore" Overture No. 3 (Beethoven), Symphony No. 3 in A minor (Rakhmaninov), Piano Concerto No. 1 in F sharp minor (Rakhmaninov.)

Last evening's concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra was made memorable primarily by two things: the first performance in Washington of Sergei Rakhmaninov's third symphony, and the appearance of the composer as soloist in his first piano concerto. It is always a privilege for an audience to greet a great living composer in the company of his major workers, and on this occasion there was a special significance in the fact that the program contained both his Opus 1, composed more than 40 years ago, and his Opus 44, completed only last August. The one represented the youth of 18, and the other the mature creative artist of 65.

As was to have been expected from so consistent a thinker as Rakhmaninov, the idiom of the F-sharp minor piano concerto speaks also in the A minor symphony. Were one to have listened to both works without knowing who the composer was, there could have been no doubt that they had emanated from the same mind. The differences between them are those which separated two periods of a life—the ardency of adolescence and the energy of experienced wisdom. Yet the voice of the older musician, uttering reflections on the mutabilities of existence, was identical with the voice of the lad who had his saddening conflicts before him.

Even at a first hearing, it is evident that the third symphony is Rakhmaninov's finest composition in that form. Not only in its dark and melancholy majesty but also in its challenging courage and its superb lyrical impetus, it is the most impressive of his orchestral works. In it his mastery of instrumentation is at its height, and his skill in tonal coloring at the peak of accomplishment. Without once losing his individual accent and turn of phrase, he has utilized modern harmony interwoven with the Slavic warp that is his heritage.

With that freedom which the evolution of the symphony allows, he has employed in certain episodes the elastic treatment of the tone-poem, yet the structure of the work is integral. The brooding little melody which opens the first movement, a tune that has a folk-like simplicity, establishes the mood of the entire symphony and stamps it unmistakably with the spirit of Russia. The second movement has an obviously romantic flavor, the theme announced by the horn against a background of harp chords, and the subject developed in a rhapsodic vein. The finale has an irresistible surge that sinks to a contemplative calm, revives in an impetuous fugal section, and rises to a commanding climax.

In his performance of the piano concerto, Rakhmaninov played with the fire and the crispness of attack that characterize his keyboard style. The familiar work, under his dextrous fingers, took on a frankness which aroused in the auditors a storm of enthusiastic commendation. Eugene Ormandy's handling of the orchestral part was a model of careful collaboration and musicianly insight.

The concert began with Beethoven's third "Leonore" overture which is a fitting entrance upon any orchestral program because of its mysterious quality of suggestion. In it Beethoven reached his superlative power of invoking suspense, and one always hears it with an almost breathless anticipation of some surprising experience.

U. S. to Train Air Mechanics For Defense

Revealed by Roosevelt Describes Shortage 7,000 Planes Studied

A Government training program for an additional number of aviation mechanics was disclosed yesterday by the President as an immediate need under the Administration's national defense policy.

In other Administration circles it was indicated that a program of "at least" 7,000 fighting planes is under consideration.

The President's statement on aviation servicing needs followed a conference with Assistant Secretary of War Johnson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison and Deputy WPA Administrator, in charge of the National Youth Administration.

The President said there is already a shortage of aviation mechanics in this country, and more trained mechanics would be needed in any large aviation program. Details of the training program, he said have not been worked out. The Government, he added, is still engaged in its broad restudy of defense needs and has not yet reached the stage of factual, detailed requirements.

Indications that strengthened aviation equipment figures prominently in defense surveys came again when the President termed out of date the Baker board report of 1934 which recommended an Army aviation goal of 2,320 planes. The President indicated for the first time that studies now in progress have gone beyond the Baker board findings.
